... direct command

Ghana President Ousts Generals, Takes Over Army

ACCRA (AP) — President Kwame Nkrumah has taken direct command of Ghana's army following widespread rumors that some generals wanted to depose him.

Sources said two generals, ousted from their posts and retired in a surprise move last month, suggested Ghana would be better off without Nkrumah. There was no indication, however, the generals actually plotted against the Ghanaian president.

Nkrumah took over command of the army Tuesday in a ceremony at Accra's Burmay camp. His newly-appointed chief of defence, Maj. Gen. N. A. Aferi, and other senior officers then took an oath of allegiance to Nkrumah.

Aferi and Maj. Gen. Charles M. Barwah were named chief and deputy chief of the defence staff early last month, replacing Maj. Gens. S. J. A. Otu and J. A. Ankrah respectively.

CRITICIZE REGIME?
Reliable reports indicated the two relieved generals expressed resentment of Nkrumah's regime. Neither of the newly-retired officers, both 49, has been held or charged.

Ghana's government-controlled press and radio gave no reasons for the unexpected staff changes.

By taking direct command of the 10,000-man army Nkrumah left Defence Minister Kofi Baako with only the jobs of civil defence, the veterans organization and administrative work.

Nkrumah previously had taken direct command of his personal security battalion which acts as his household guard.

Ghana's special security police are Russian - advised. All other police have been, disarmed since a young constable attempted to shoot Nkrumah in February, 1964.

New Race Riots Feared

By The Associated Press

A flying squad of Mississippi national guardsmen with fixed bayonets moved into the downtown area of Natchez this afternoon as city officials rejected demands by Negroes.

City officials announced rejection of the Negroes' 12 demands following a two-hour meeting with representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Several hundred Negroes, singing songs and clapping, gathered at a Negro leader's home to await word on the negotiations.

Governor Paul Johnson ordered 650 Mississippi guardsmen into Natchez earlier today, saying a riot was imminent.

In rejecting the Negroes' demands, city officials said many of them were beyond the city's jurisdiction to solve.

The Negro demands were made following the booby-trap bombing last Friday of a Negro leader's car.

The bombing victim, George Metcalfe of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, (NAACP) was in fair condition with leg, arm and face injuries from the blast Friday in a parking lot.

CONFERENCE DELAYED

The bi-racial conference was delayed Wednesday night when officials decided it was better not to meet at night.

Negro demands include denunciation of the Klan by the city of Natchez, desegregation of public facilities, equal job opportunities and police escorts for Negro funerals.

NAACP field secretary Charles Evers said Wednesday "tension is growing." Mississippi Klan Dragon E. L. McDaniels said, "we have been armed for some time and we are going to stay armed." Natchez is not going to be another Los Angeles.

In another trouble spot, Plymouth, N.C., civil rights leaders were granted a permit for a march to the courthouse and new bi-racial council held its first meeting.

Schweitzer Gravely Ill

LAMBARENE, Gabon (Reuters) — Dr. Albert Schweitzer spent a peaceful night but was reported confined to his hospital room today and seeing no one.

Fellow physicians at the jungle hospital, deep in the heart of equatorial Africa, said Wednesday the 90-year-old missionary doctor was seriously ill, suffering from fatigue.

Reports from the hospital today said the fatigue was caused partly by the number of visitors he has recently received.

New Crisis Hits Wilson With Death of Speaker

General Election May Be Outcome

LONDON (Reuters) — Sir Harry Hylton-Foster, speaker of the House of Commons, collapsed and died today, plunging Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government into a political and constitutional crisis.

Hylton-Foster, 60, who contested the last general election as a non-party candidate, was dead on arrival at a hospital after collapsing on a London street.

A policeman tried in vain to revive him with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when he collapsed just a few streets from the spot where U.S. United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson died July 14.

The prime minister immediately called in house leader Herbert Bowden to discuss the implications for the government, which holds office with a slim over-all margin of two in the 630-seat lower house.

The margin was cut from three recently by the death of a Labor MP, and this constituency is expected to elect another Labor candidate in a by-election.

MAY SPEED ELECTION

There was immediate speculation that the crisis might be settled only by calling a general election earlier than expected.

If the Labor party named a new speaker from within its own parliamentary ranks, and lost the by-election, its majority could be reduced to one.

With the death of Hylton-Foster, much will now depend on the stand taken by new Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath.

The government could lose its over-all margin in the house if...

● The government lost its pending by-election at Erith and Crayford, near London, cutting its over-all margin to one. This would be a shock result, since Labor's majority over Conservatives was nearly 9,000 votes in the general election.

● Heath refused to allow a Conservative to become Speaker, forcing the government to provide the new Speaker from its own ranks.

● The safe Conservative seat of the cities of London and Westminster—until now held by Hylton-Foster—was again contested on a party basis and won by the opposition.

The entire situation became even more complex in its purely constitutional aspect, since there is no modern precedent for the death of a Speaker during a parliamentary recess.

This could hold up technical arrangements for the Erith by-election, originally planned for early October—well before Parliament returns from its summer recess Oct. 26.

The authority for a special election has to be given by the Speaker, and this now will be delayed until a new Speaker is chosen.

Both sides agreed last October that Hylton-Foster—former Conservative minister who became speaker during the previous conservative administration—should keep his post.

'Kidnapped' Cubans Win Freedom

HAVANA (Reuters) — Premier Fidel Castro has agreed to British requests to release 19 Cuban refugees seized from Anguilla Cay in the Bahamas two years ago, authoritative sources said today.

The first two were due to leave today for Nassau and the rest were to follow in pairs at two-week intervals.

The refugees, including women and children who left Cuba secretly, were spotted by Cuban planes and seized by a Cuban launch when they were already on the British island in August, 1963.

The incident, which involved a breach of international law, aroused considerable concern at the time, and the British government was understood to have been pressing the Cuban government ever since to return the 19 to Anguilla Cay.

Brains Drain Into Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has been on the receiving end of the post-war "brain drain," according to a research study prepared for the Economic Council of Canada.

The study made public today showed that in the years 1950 to 1963 Canada had an annual average inflow of professionally trained immigrants numbering 7,790, while there was an annual outflow of emigrants in the same categories numbering 5,476.

Pakistani Troops Drive To Cut Major Road Link

Tanks, Planes Support Offensive Into Kashmir

KARACHI (UPI) — Troops of the regular Pakistani army have advanced 28 miles east into Indian-held Kashmir in their first open assault against Indian army troops, it was reported unofficially here tonight.

The first thrust of the attack Wednesday carried the Pakistanis up to eight miles inside Indian territory and the Pakistanis moved another 20 miles today against what a spokesman called only "negligible" resistance.

The reports said the troops accompanied by Azad (Free) Kashmiri forces had reached the town of Akhnur, barely 15 miles from Jammu City, a major communication link on road connecting India and Pakistan.

The troops were reported using tanks and artillery and moving under cover of warplanes.

(The Indian defence ministry announced in New Delhi that air battles broke out today over the disputed area and that the Indian planes drove off Pakistani F86 Sabrejets believed equipped with American Sidewinder missiles.

He said the Pakistani attack had all the features of a "planned and organized invasion."

There still was no official reaction to peace moves by the United Nations and UN Secretary General Thant. Thant has sought for weeks to prevent an Indo-Pakistan war.

Thant called on India and Pakistan Wednesday night to stop shooting on the Kashmir ceasefire line and withdraw the troops they have sent across it.

He sent identical cables to Prime Minister Shastri and President Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan.

Thant said the ceasefire agreement of July, 1949, had been "reduced to little consequence" and "an outright military confrontation between the armed forces of India and Pakistan... may be imminent."

(The Indian defence ministry said tonight Indian soldiers were putting up "a vigorous fight and are taking a heavy toll of the enemy.")

American sources confirmed that India had lodged a "vigorous protest" against the use by Pakistan of Patton tanks supplied by the United States. The tanks were delivered to Pakistan on condition they would be used only against possible Communist aggression.

(The late U.S. Secretary of State) John Foster Dulles and others gave us all kinds of assurances this would not happen," one Indian official commented about the tanks. "But here they are."

Indian sources claimed they had destroyed 13 of the tanks.

WHERE PAKISTANI troops swept into India-held Kashmir is indicated in map. The forces captured two Indian posts today in the Bhimbar sector, said a spokesman in Karachi. The spokesman acknowledged that Pakistani defenders had lost Haji Pir Pass, about 10 miles inside Pakistan-held Kashmir, to the Indians. The spokesman said that early in August the Indians had crossed the cease-fire line and occupied two outposts in the Tithwal sector.

PHONE TIP LEADS TO STOLEN BONDS

'Go to Field, Find $2 Million'

MONTREAL (CP) — Possibly more than $2,000,000 worth of bonds stolen from a bank last spring have been recovered by police as the result of a telephone tip.

The bonds were found Wednesday night tightly packed in a suitcase and several cardboard boxes, in a field north of Metropolitan Boulevard off Christophe Colomb St.

The robbery was staged the weekend of April 10-11 at a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in the Van Horne shopping centre. There were estimates at the time that the total loot may be as high as $3,000,000.

A team of eight detectives worked today testing the recovered bonds for fingerprints and tabulating them by serial numbers and denominations.

They said the total value of the recovered bonds may be well more than $2,000,000. The bonds, most of them Canada Savings Bonds, range in denomination from $50 to $10,000.

Detective - Insp. Roland Perron of the Montreal police department was in his office Thursday when a telephone call came through about 1:30 p.m.

The caller said: "Be in your office between three and five o'clock this afternoon. I'll have something to tell you that's plenty big."

Insp. Perron waited until 5:30 p.m. There was no call. He left for an appointment at city hall, then went home to dinner.

Concerned that the promised call may have come in his absence, he returned to his office. But the call went to his home. The caller was told the inspector was at headquarters.

The bank had offered a $25,000 reward for arrest of the perpetrators of the crime.

The robbery set off a world-wide hunt for the robbery gang. Two men were arrested in Plattsburgh, N.Y., when they tried to cash travellers' cheques taken in the robbery.

A Winnipeg man was picked up for the same reason at a Hamburg, N.Y., racetrack. A Vancouver man was arrested in England when he tried to cash $600 worth of travellers' cheques at Hove, Sussex.

Joe Bedard, chief security officer for the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal, said today that no direct link between the picked-up men and the robbery has been established and the cases have not been proceeded with. Charges of receiving have been considered.

The robbery was one of the largest in Canada, believed to rank second only to the robbery May 2-4, 1958, at the Brockville Trust and Savings Co., in Brockville, Ont. Final count of the loot stolen from vaults was $3,500,000.

WHY, HELLO, DOLLY, YOU'RE IN COLD WAR

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union asked the United States today to postpone a visit here of the musical show "Hello Dolly."

The U.S. Embassy called it part of a "campaign of harassment" on the cultural exchange front. "Hello Dolly," starring Mary Martin, was due here the first week in October as part of the U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange agreement.

Western sources said the postponement was a reflection of the worsening international situation, particularly over Viet Nam, and put a new chill into Moscow-Washington relations.

ANYONE GOT $2 MILLION HANDY?

Country-Size Ranch for Sale

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — This may be the perfect gift for that fellow who has everything: A Nevada ranch the size of Luxembourg.

The ranch of slain millionaire William A. Bartholomae, covering 900 square miles, is up for sale.

Included are cattle and coyotes, green irrigated valleys and desert mountains, 54 horses and a host of buildings. If you like space, it's roughly 68 miles from front door to back gate.

There are 20 buildings at the Fish Creek Ranch including a cottage, office, kitchen-recreation hall, bunk house, saddle and tack room and barns. Sealed bids will be opened Sept. 7.

But the property has been appraised at $1,876,313.90, including land and leases, grazing rights, the horses, 2,220 head of Hereford cattle and $9,535 worth of vehicles.

The sale notice stipulates that the entire ranch is to be sold as a package.

Bartholomae, 70, was fatally stabbed in his Newport Beach, Calif., home Jan. 5, 1964, by Minola Gillardo, 32, a dancer from Spain. Her sister was married to Bartholomae's brother.

She was acquitted July 7, 1964, after testifying that language barrier between her and Bartholomae led to a struggle and his death.

Nkrumah will never let it be said he ain't Ghana reign no more.

Boyd Defends Medicare Blast

A strongly-worded speech against the proposed national medicare proposal was defended today by the president of the Victoria Medical Society after it was attacked by the Victoria Labour Council.

Dr. D. M. Boyd, VMS president, said he personally supported the main criticisms voiced by Dr. G. Scott Wallace against Prime Minister Pearson's universal medicare program.

He added that although not officially approved by the society, Dr. Wallace's speech represented the feeling of a majority of doctors.

Labor union delegates passed a unanimous resolution Wednesday night condemning Dr. Wallace and the society for the tone of his speech and the suggestion that doctors would rather strike than accept a compulsory plan in which they were not consulted.

"I haven't heard or seen the text and there has not been too much said to me about the speech by other doctors," Dr. Boyd said.

ECHOED FEELINGS

"But, although he wasn't officially speaking for us, I think he was echoing the feelings of most doctors."

Dr. Boyd said he personally was in "full agreement" with criticisms of a universal plan and failure of the government to invite the Canadian Medical Association to help plan some form of medical insurance.

"I feel every man should stand on his own two feet and only those who can't pay should be helped by the government," he said.

MINIMUM WAGES

Only 4 Orders Below $1 Level

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Labor Reporter

One-third of British Columbia's minimum wage orders equal or exceed the minimum set by the federal government.

But individual orders covering the biggest employee groups in the province fall 25 cents below the federal minimum of $1.25 an hour.

The federal minimum enacted this year applies to the roughly 10 per cent of Canadians who work in industries falling under federal jurisdiction.

Unlike the federal labor code, B.C. prescribes minimum wages on an occupational or industry basis.

There are 34 individual minimum wage orders contained in the annual summary of regulations printed by the provincial government.

They range from as little as 50 cents an hour to as much as $2 an hour.

The biggest areas of employment are logging and sawmills, the wholesale and retail trade, manufacturing and offices.

The minimum wage in these employee groups is $1 an hour, but in three of them—wholesale and retail, manufacturing and offices—this rate is payable only in the fourth month after starting at 85 cents.

The minimums are set by the Board of Industrial Relations, an eight-member group headed by the deputy labor minister, William Sands.

Generally, the minimums follow the pattern of wages in the industry or occupation concerned, although this is not always the case.

Under review at the present time is the $1 an hour minimum for logging and sawmills. Basic rate for coastal union workers is $2.36.

At a public hearing two months ago, the International Wood-said. "And I think that's the opinion of most people who have thought about the subject."

CONSULTED

"And the doctors, who are expected to participate, should be consulted first by the government. People in any field should be consulted about legislation which is going to involve them."

"Labor, for instance, is most irate if there is any labor legislation passed without them being consulted first," said Dr. Boyd.

At the labor council meeting, Jack Driscoll proposed motions of censure against the society and Dr. Wallace.

DISGUSTING

He called doctor's comments "a disgusting exhibition." The use of such words as "bastard" and "complete abortion" in Dr. Wallace's description of the Pearson proposal.

E. T. Staley, president of the B.C. Federation of Labour, said the speech was premature and ill founded.

"I don't think the doctor knows what the scheme is going to be," he said.

"I don't know why he wants to condemn holus-bolus a scheme to help many Canadians."

"He has taken a very reactionary opinion. It's about time he looked forward instead of backward."

FORMER Hong Kong prisoner of war with a long and distinguished military career and assistant deputy minister in the veterans affairs department, Dr. John N. Crawford, 55, has been named deputy health minister.

He takes up his post Sept. 13 and succeeds Dr. G. D. W. Cameron, 66, who is retiring.

Two-City Dahlia Show Reviving?

Local flower fans are hoping to revive interest in an international dahlia show, last held in 1916, which alternated each year between Vancouver and Seattle.

Saanich dahlia grower Mrs. Patricia Pierri will negotiate with American growers to try and start up the show again when she attends the Seattle Dahlia Show this weekend.

Representing the Victoria Horticultural Society and the Vancouver Island dahlia growers, she will be the first Canadian dahlia grower asked to speak at the Seattle conference.

While there, she will also receive trophies for four Saanich dahlia growers who captured honors at last weekend's Snohomish County Dahlia Show at Everett, Wash.

They are Maj. George Wiggan, who received two firsts, a section championship and a silver tray for the pom-pom exhibition; Lois Freeborn, two firsts, a section championship, and a trophy for the lilac veil exhibit; Gordon Benthman, four firsts, a section championship, a trophy for the exhibit of miniature dahlia, and the best A-sized bloom in show; and Harry Parker, 11 firsts, seven seconds, one third, and four section championships.

First chance is at the eleventh annual fall show of the Gordon Head Garden Club on Saturday, Sept. 11.

Entry forms must be received not later than 6 p.m. on the 10th, and prize list and form can be obtained from the secretary, T. D. Clark, telephone 477-6718.

The second chance is the Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society's early flowering chrysanthemum and dahlia show, a two-day exhibition for Friday and Saturday, Sept. 10 and 11.

Entry forms for this show must be mailed to the secretary, G. L. Benthman, by Tuesday, Sept. 7, and schedules are available by telephoning 384-2201 or 382-9836.

Construction Costs Soar For Province

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction costs in British Columbia have soared 15 to 20 per cent in the past nine months, says a report published by the Vancouver Real Estate Board.

The survey blamed higher labor costs, increased federal sales tax on building materials, higher profit-taking by contractors and the expected costs of the Canada Pension Plan starting in January.

Wages increased nine per cent and fringe benefits to construction workers another 15 per cent in the past two years, said the survey.

"Since the early part of the year a booming economy has taken its toll of construction budgets, and bid levels are far higher than at any time in the past decade."

The report also said contractors "are now allowing proper percentages for profit and overhead whereas in recent years these items were often what the market would bear in view of severe competition."

The report was issued today following a warning by Premier Bennett to both industry and labor not to seek every nickel of profit and higher wages. He called for restraint in the face of spiralling costs in the fast-moving B.C. economy.

The survey said contractors apparently were also adding to their bids to take into account the full effect of the 11 per cent federal sales tax on building materials and added costs of the Canada Pension Plan, to which employers must contribute when it becomes effective next year.

Fight Over Brains

HECHINGEN, West Germany (Reuters) — Starving inmates fought each other over the brains of 22 Russian soldiers executed at Dautmergen concentration camp, a Jewish witness told a war crimes court here Wednesday.

Szymon Tubaszewicz, 40, of Halifax, was giving evidence in the trial of four former SS men charged with complicity in the murder of inmates at several concentration camps.

Plane Flips Over

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A pilot and two passengers escaped injury Wednesday when a float plane flipped over as it landed at the head of Bute Inlet, 50 miles northeast of here. A spokesman for Island Airlines said pilot John Lightbown and two unidentified men were picked up by a boat from a nearby logging camp.

Wide Power On Cheats Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — The government must have wide powers to catch fraudulent taxpayers and the fact a few innocent people may have inadvertently become involved in the process should not deter such activity, J. T. Thorson, retired president of the Exchequer Court, said Wednesday.

"There is an absolute necessity to have this procedure to catch tax cheaters," he said. "Some innocent people have become involved, but they are few. Against this is the need to catch fraudulent taxpayers and the need to protect the whole of the public."

His comments were made during a wide-ranging exchange on the need for broad search and seizure powers granted the government under the Income Tax Act during the annual meeting of the taxation section of the Canadian Bar Association.

Senator Asks Study On N.A. Water Plan

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government has taken no position on the $100,000,000 plan to channel water from northern Canadian rivers and Alaska southward as far as Mexico.

A resolution asking for an economic and engineering study was introduced in the Senate Wednesday by Frank Moss, Utah Democrat who heads a subcommittee which took a preliminary look at the scheme last year.

But a spokesman in the Moss office said today that the U.S. government has no policy on the matter. Senator Moss wrote State Secretary Rusk earlier this year to ask that Canada be approached about turning studies on the "immense" project over to the International Joint Commission.

No action has been taken by the state department and senior authorities in Ottawa have said nothing has come from Washington.

The IJC is the Canada-U.S. agency handling boundary water problem and right now it is deep in an extensive look at the problems causing and caused by the low levels of the Great Lakes.

The Moss spokesman today

called the senator's resolution a "good try to get the IJC interested" but this would require official action on both sides of the border.

The water-diversion plan is called the North American Water and Power Alliance and it is the brainchild of the Ralph M. Parsons Company, a construction and engineering firm with world-wide operations.

Tentative soundings in Canada by the company are known to have drawn indications that until Canada has a good picture of all her fresh-water resources—and this will take at least five years even though a lot more effort has been turned loose on this work recently—there is nothing to be said.

After that, is still not too promising in view of public statements by Northern Affairs Minister Loring or Premier Bennett of British Columbia that Canada's water isn't for sale.

West Germany, Canada Settle Policy Dispute

BONN (Reuters) — Canada and West Germany have settled a dispute over a speech last month by the Canadian delegate to the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference it was announced here Wednesday.

The chief West German government spokesman said a West German query in Ottawa brought swift and satisfactory assurance that Canada did not consider Western security could be a subject for negotiation with Russia.

The spokesman, reporting to a press conference on Wednesday's cabinet meeting here, said the government noted with satisfaction that the British and the United States governments gave similar assurances to allay "certain misunderstandings" about Canadian disarmament policy.

Canada's chief disarmament negotiator, Lt. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, said in a speech to the Geneva meeting Aug. 24 that the issue of preventing the spread of nuclear weapons to non-nuclear nations through NATO must be settled in negotiations by the United States, Britain and Russia.

The Burns speech was interpreted in Bonn as suggesting secret negotiations between the U.S., Britain and Russia on a NATO nuclear force acceptable to the Russians.

West Germany is pressing for a multilateral force in the Atlantic alliance in which it would share in the control of nuclear weapons.

The Canadian assurance will help to ease embarrassment to Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's Christian Democratic party over searching attacks on Canadian and American proposals at Geneva by ex-chancellor Konrad Adenauer, the party chairman.

'Costliest' Ship Strike Now Over

NEW YORK (AP)—Crews return today to ships that had been strikebound for 78 days, signalling the end of one of the longest and costliest maritime walkouts in U.S. history.

Deck and radio officers, who had removed their picket lines Monday, voted Wednesday to ratify four-year contracts agreed on in Washington sessions.

The 13,000-ton freighter American Crusader, owned by the United States Line, cast off from her Hudson River pier Wednesday night. More of the approximately 100 idle ships in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports were to follow today.

Incomplete results showed members of the International Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots (AFL-CIO) voting heavily for the new contract.

Officials of the other striking AFL-CIO union, the American Radio Association, said their members also voted overwhelmingly to end the strike.

The U.S. Maritime Association estimated the strike cost more than $150,000,000 in direct losses to the companies, the strikers and other employees idled by the walkout.

CHURCHES TO UNITE OVER HYMN BOOK

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Anglican Church and the United Church will sing a common song while they talk about union.

The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada approved a proposal Wednesday for a common hymn book, the first formal step in bringing their forms of worship together.

The new book will have strong, inspirational, personal hymns, said Rt. Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, Bishop of Toronto.

The churches made a joint statement to the synod saying the hymnal must be "not only ecumenical but contemporary."

It must be more catholic in its range than existing books of both churches, the statement said.

ANGLICAN BID

New Divorce Law Planned

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — The divorced Anglican has a promise that he may look forward to building a new marriage with the help and blessing of his church.

The pledge was delivered Wednesday night by the general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada with its resounding approval of a new canon on church marriage.

The canon needs the approval of the church's next synod, which puts off the change until 1967.

Under the existing canon, which remains the law of the church for the intervening two years, a divorced person cannot be remarried by an Anglican priest.

Parish priests say one unhappy effect of the law has been to drive people from the church. They are married in civil ceremonies or in other churches, and their break with the Anglican communion is made with great suffering.

Among 300 clergy and lay delegates in the lower house of the synod only a scatter of nays opposed the new canon. Of 29 bishops in the upper house, only two or three votes were heard in opposition.

APPLY TO TRIBUNALS

Under the canon divorced persons apply to diocesan tribunals, headed by bishops, seeking approval for their new marriages.

The canon is unique among the laws of the church because it states not only rules but doctrine—in this case the church's standard of what a Christian marriage means.

This break with canonical tradition caused the legal counsel of the synod to object to the new canon Wednesday night, and a four-hour fight over procedure and substance ensued. Bishops, laymen and priests lined up against the lawyers.

Canon T. L. Leadwater of Edmonton said the clergy of the church desperately need the canon in their work. He did not want the synod "harangued and bamboozled" by its lawyers.

The synod tossed out four amendments, including one from Mr. Justice G. R. Montgomery of the Quebec court of Queen's bench to delay the canon two years while its authors made revisions to suit the lawyers.

The new canon is the product of three years' work by a 12-man commission under the bishop of Saskatoon, Rt. Rev. S. C. Steer. Two commission members opposed the majority's view that while marriage ought not to be dissolved, the doctrine of lifelong marriage

CP Needs Diesels To Haul Grain

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Canadian Pacific Railway is behind now in its efforts to move the great volume of grain that the Canadian Wheat Board wants moved and maintaining the Dominion in operation will prevent diesels being transferred in the number planned, a CPR spokesman in Montreal said Thursday.

"We are tight on power now. We are now considering, in the light of the board of transport's order to continue operating the Dominion, what we can do to assign extra diesels to the movement of grain and still continue the Dominion in operation," the spokesman said.

"We are behind now in the requests made to us by the wheat board for moving grain. Both railways are behind. The board is urging a maximum movement before the close of navigation and we are doing everything we can to meet that request," he said.

LIMITED SUPPLY

With a limited supply of locomotives much depends on the use of the diesels. The CPR estimates that one diesel in grain service can haul the equivalent of 1,000,000 bushels from the heart of the prairies to the lakehead before freeze up.

A locomotive which is used for hauling passenger trains cannot be used for grain traffic. The Dominion transcontinental service ties up about 25 locomotives.

The CPR had announced it was going to discontinue the operation of the Dominion and shift those diesel units to the hauling of freight such as grain.

The railway has now been told to keep the Dominion operating until the board completes a public investigation of complaints over the cancellation of the Dominion transcontinental service.

Woman Fails To Save Son In Drowning

FERNIE (CP) — A Trail woman tried for 20 minutes Wednesday to breathe life back into her three-year-old son after he fell into Rozen Lake here from a wharf.

Mrs. Michele DiVito jumped into five feet of water to rescue her son, Michele Jr.

Police said she gave him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until two first aid men from a lumber company nearby arrived to take over.

Two hours of artificial respiration failed to revive the boy, police said.

Just Who Is Enemy If War Declared?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A formal declaration of war by the United States in the current Viet Nam conflict would raise so many difficulties that it apparently has been ruled out by U.S. policymakers.

This does not reflect any Washington disbelief in the reality of the situation in South-east Asia. President Johnson has used the word "war" and has pledged an unlimited American commitment to prevent the Reds from taking over South Viet Nam.

However a formal war declaration—a power given to Congress under the U.S. constitution—would pose major complications for U.S. strategy, which is tailored to a limited objective and to keeping the contest confined.

"The U.S. aim is to help the Saigon government repel an aggression from the north. It is not to overthrow the Hanoi regime ruling North Viet Nam, or to get into war with Red China or Russia. Furthermore, the Communist attacks in South Viet Nam vary from organized military assaults to isolated terrorist crimes."

WAR—AGAINST WHOM?

If Congress were to declare war, a first question naturally would be: Against whom would war be declared?

The Viet Cong? The United States does not recognize the claims of these Communist guerrillas to being a government, and much of what they do—such as murder and arson—can be classed as acts subject to criminal prosecution.

The government of North Viet Nam? The United States says it does not want to destroy this government, which would be a natural objective if war were declared against it.

Red China or the Soviet Union? Washington wants to press its effort in Viet Nam without getting into a fight with the big Communist powers, which a declaration of war against them would involve.

What's This?

IT IS SO UNUSUAL TO HEAR words of caution from Premier Bennett on anything touching British Columbia's economy that his warning issued at Prince George this week has occasioned wide interest.

Mr. Bennett reportedly spoke of the dangers of financial excesses, of recessions, and of "a crash again" unless a balance is kept. There must be restraint, he said, by management in looking for profits and by labor in seeking higher returns.

High wages and high profits could result in a public refusal to pay, and this, said Mr. Bennett, could result in a business recession.

Mr. Bennett has asserted on numerous occasions that when he says something for public consumption he is not fooling. There is no bluff in his pronouncements, he is fond of telling us. He means what he says.

On this basis his new note of concern for economic law, his newly expressed appreciation of cost as a factor in consumer demand, have ominous overtones. What has turned the premier from his habitual declarations of happy, unending prosperity to grave public warnings of inexorable economic laws?

Opposition leaders speculate that sharply rising construction costs have impressed themselves on Mr. Bennett and caused him to worry about the ultimate price that he must charge for the products of his hydro-electric programs. So often he has promised a low rate for electricity produced on the Columbia and Peace Rivers; so often he has scoffed at warnings that the output of the turbines of his "two-river" policy might prove much more costly than he claimed; so often he has given the impression that nothing but unalloyed prosperity can be the destiny of this province. Now come sober warnings against seeking too much in profits and wages, sombre observations involving the almost unspeakable word "recession". The public has little to go on. The full cost details of Mr. Bennett's industrial and utility operations are difficult to ascertain. The PGE Railway, the ferry services, the Hydro's production and distribution of electricity, and now the new multi-million-dollar dam and powerhouse construction projects—all these are conducted in a relative vacuum as far as the general public is concerned. It hears of services breaking even on operating costs, for instance, or showing a profit, but there is always an unknown quantity in the equation, there is always a vagueness in the public's grasp of overhead costs which leaves the whole picture clouded. But there is no cloudiness about three facts: We have the highest taxes, the highest annual budget and the highest contingent debt in our history.

Are Mr. Bennett's Peace and Columbia construction costs soaring too high to permit a reasonable price for the eventual product? We are not likely to find out through government sources.

Mr. Bennett does well to fear the effects of a recession. For the vast development programs on which he has ridden to political popularity, the sweeping welfare programs which he has made his trade mark, depend on a rising economy and a continuance of the huge revenues which the government receives from income and sales tax sources.

Should there be a serious slump in these revenues the government might well be in deep trouble. Even though the premier has predicted the province's biggest boom for this year, it is odd that he should have picked Prince George, the centre of much of British Columbia's construction spurge, to utter such atypical remarks as: "there could be a crash again"; and "a recession builds on itself the same as prosperity".

Viet Nam Flypaper

NOW THAT THE UNITED States has embarked on what the New York Times describes as a new "peace offensive" to end the Viet Nam war, what is to be made of the statement this week by South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen-Cao Ky that his country is "not ready now" to begin negotiations?

Premier Ky states that South Viet Nam would not begin negotiations until there were firm guarantees that North Vietnamese troops would leave the south and that American troops would stay until Saigon asked them to leave. He added that his regime could not face the threat of Communist political agitation until it has time to start overcoming what he described as the many social and economic injustices in South Viet Nam.

It may not be unreasonable for General Ky to demand that Hanoi remove its military influence from the south as a condition to peace negotiations. It is quite another thing to attempt to lock in American troops as part of the deal, particularly on the basis that they must stay until social and economic injustices are righted. General Ky may honestly be in favor of a new deal for the common people of his country but is there any guarantee that he would long remain in power if he attempted the reforms which South Viet Nam needs?

There is no doubt that the United States has added a new dimension to its involvement in Viet Nam with the reassignment of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge as ambassador with, apparently, much wider powers to initiate on-the-spot policy than he had when he was in Saigon before. Mr. Lodge, indeed, described his objective as a "true revolution" for the country which would result in winning the trust and active support of the bulk of the South Vietnamese people.

The principal assistant to Ambassador Lodge is a retired army expert on guerrilla warfare, Major-General Lansdale, who earned an almost legendary reputation in the Philippines after the war and in South Viet Nam in the early 1950s. His technique is to combat revolts by producing revolutions of his own with the aim of breaking up feudalistic and oligarchic controls and supplanting them with democratic controls. The technique worked in the Philippines against the Communist Huk guerrillas and promised some success in Viet Nam before his work became distasteful to the Diem regime.

Will the Saigon government cooperate with Mr. Lodge and Gen. Lansdale in promoting a "true revolution" in South Viet Nam now, rather than at some misty future date? Premier Ky's statement on terms for negotiation rather indicate that there is some doubt of this. Instead there is the feeling of danger that the United States might be mouse-trapped into supporting some future corrupt regime whose only purpose in retaining power would be the bleeding of the Vietnamese people. Under Premier Ky's formula, for instance, it would be up to Saigon to determine when the threat of Communist political agitation had receded to the point where democratic elections could be held—a repeat of the Diem tactics to remain in power.

In the end the United States may find itself defeated in Viet Nam not by the Viet Cong or by North Vietnamese troops, but by the obduracy and greed of the politicians and military commanders in Saigon.

FROM WASHINGTON

The Bureaucrats Aren't Placing Bets

THE annual report of the International Monetary Fund, published on Monday, comes at a time of more than usual world interest in the ordinarily dry and difficult subject of "international liquidity." Difficult or not, it is fundamental to the standard of living of everyone in the world. "Liquidity" may be summed up as the amount of reserves and credits available to countries of the world to conduct their business with each other.

In the past few years, concern has been rising among experts that the amount of liquidity now available is insufficient and may cause world trade to "seize up," to quote words frequently used by British Prime Minister Wilson. Other experts deny this, and for every diagnosis of the disease many cures are offered.

One Certainty

The one certainty is that there exists a state of international unease. The United States, which along with Britain is proprietor of one of the world's two major reserve currencies, has formally recognized this. Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler on July 10 surprised international monetary circles by calling, on behalf of President Johnson, for the first world monetary conference since the present international monetary system was set up at Bretton Woods in 1944.

Now Mr. Fowler is in Paris, headquarters of official opposition to reform of the system that has served the non-Communist world for two decades. He will meet finance ministers and central bank chiefs of six European countries before returning to Washington from London on September 10.

The purpose of his visit is to push for an early start in preparations for a conference. The world's finance ministers hold their annual meeting here at the end of next month; the U.S. hopes a preparatory commission can be formed at this meeting. The French publicly take a dim view of this, but there are grounds for Franco-U.S. agreement.

Danger of Failure

Mr. Fowler, in his initial announcement, stressed the danger of calling a formal conference and having it fail. Behind-the-scenes work, he indicated, would have to assure in advance agreement on major points of monetary reform. The French say amen to that, but their emphasis is different. They favor prior settlement of international monetary issues by the "group of ten," the world's major industrial powers whose private deliberations have a colonialist smack to the underdeveloped countries who have the most to lose by strangling or manipulation of liquidity.

The IMF report, prepared for the annual meeting, notes that in the last quarter of 1964 "an exceptionally large imbalance in world payments, concentrated in the two main reserve centres, put more strain on the international monetary system than had been experienced for some time."

(Since the end of 1964 the U.S. has acted to ease its balance-of-payments deficit. Its actions are showing signs of success. The British position is much more precarious; but the great dilemma is that if the two great reserve currency powers succeed fully in correcting their own positions, the financing available for other countries' international trade dries up correspondingly. Yet if the outflow of dollars and pounds into the liquidity pool is excessively generous, the value of the reserve currencies themselves is threatened, with potentially disastrous consequences.)

The IMF executive board chairman, Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, has a reputation as a conservative on the question of expanded liquidity. But the report shows that IMF directors are extremely sensitive to the extensive public discussion of liquidity that has been in progress.

While noting the dangers of excessive liquidity—"some countries are likely to pay too little heed to possible deficits and hence to tend to engage in overexpansive financial policies"—the report discusses recent IMF studies of ways to create additional reserves.

"A basic assumption of these studies," it says, "has been that no change will be made in the price of gold in terms of currencies in general. This assumption corresponds to the endorsement of the established price of gold as one of the bases of the present monetary system

FROM MELBOURNE

Aussies Have Our Problems

MELBOURNE—Mr. John McEwen, deputy prime minister and leader of the Farmers' party, has been pointing afresh to what he regards as the peril of letting a large slice of Australian industry fall into overseas hands.

At a conference of his party in Perth he renewed his exposition of the proposition that Australia was living from day to day by selling a bit of its heritage. "This lack of Australian enterprise," he said bluntly, "isn't good enough." Australians, he went on, should make overseas investors more aware of their desire to participate in foreign investments. Some overseas capital was clearly essential to national development but he had been "rocked" by the passage of much food manufacture into overseas ownership and he was thoroughly unhappy about the extent to which oil search rights had passed into foreign hands, though he realized that Australian capital was not available.

Promptly Answered

When Mr. McEwen made this speech Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies was in hospital in Melbourne but he was promptly answered by Treasurer Harold Holt, deputy leader of the Liberal party. Foreign investment was vital to Australia's growth and security, said Mr. Holt, and on that ground the government encouraged it.

The need for overseas capital would persist as long as primary resources were under exceptional pressure for national development and Australia had heavy responsibilities for defence and international aid.

The harsh reality was that a nation of 11 million people in an area of three million square miles had not enough money for these tasks, hence there was no dispute in any area of government that as far ahead as could be seen, a strong, steady flow of capital would be essential. The government had never wavered in the view that the advantages far outweighed the disadvantages.

Observers incline to think that overseas capital is not so much Mr. McEwen's target as his ammunition. His unrest, they note, is increasingly manifest as the possibility of Sir Robert Menzies' retirement looms larger. He may have one of two objectives.

One is to deter Sir Robert from stepping down. The prime minister, whose doctors have now assured him he is very fit for a man of his age, may well feel disposed to stay in office while Mr. McEwen leads the Farmers' party, lest he expose his successor to a disastrous conflict with so shrewd and strong-willed a partner. Sir Robert and Mr. McEwen have contrived to accept differences without much damage to their coalition; an inexperienced Liberal leader might not have as much success.

Mr. McEwen's alternative objective is probably to give Sir Robert's prospective successor ample notice that he cannot take for granted unquestioning support from the Farmers' party. For six years or more Mr. McEwen has scored many successes for the Farmers' party, the latest being the maintenance of rural representation in the House of Representatives, despite the overwhelming preponderance of population in the big cities. It may not be as simple to score if the next prime minister is less able to dominate Liberal backbenchers objecting to continued concessions to the Farmers' party.

Meanwhile if owners of Australian enterprises choose to sell out, nothing much can be done to deter them without control of investment and for this the government has no taste. The Labor opposition wants legislation providing for an Australian equity of at least 40 per cent in overseas holdings.

Continuing Conflict

Overseas Control

A study of overseas investment recently published by the Melbourne stock exchange showed that overseas ownership of manufacture of pharmaceutical products was 97 per cent, of petroleum refining and distribution 95 per cent, of automobile manufacture 95 per cent, of soap and detergent manufacture 80 per cent and of food manufacture 50 per cent; and as Mr. Holt pointed out, massive foreign investment for the exploitation of iron ore, in Western Australia and bauxite in Queensland, which is 75 per cent of the total, has lent a tremendous impetus to these developments.

Since the end of the last war there has been a total inflow of over $5,000 million in overseas capital, of which more than half has come from the United Kingdom and most of the rest from the United States.

Smoke Pollution

Re Mr. R. Faulks' letter on pollution, I am one of the weary complainers. We have tried most everything except the legal aspect. We've seen most officials at City Hall except the Mayor. It's just like playing ping-pong, they bounce the problem around from one to another. Only Thursday we phoned the smoke inspector, and believe me he's fed up with our voice. He just said get on to the newspapers; that, too, we've done. They've even taken pictures.

Good luck to Mr. John Tisdalle, MLA, if he can swing it, but I think he'll be wasting his money because if Plummer Bay take out their cone burners and are allowed to burn the same garbage in smoke stacks, the same as B.C. Forest Products are allowed to do, it will be twice as bad. It used to be only five days a week with a reprieve at weekends, but now it's seven days. Saturday night we watched smoke pouring out black for two solid hours from the stacks at B.C. Forest Products, and we woke up to a beautiful bright Sunday morning, but you should have seen the cars. That's our early morning chore, washing cars, then 10 or 12 times a day sweeping soot away from doors so that it's not walked into the rooms.

If Mr. Tisdalle can swing his proposition to full satisfaction, then let's all wake up and make a real effort even if it does mean digging in our pockets. There must be some solution.—E. M. Hawkes, 414 Gorge Rd. E.

Defenders

As a visitor from California, I congratulate Victorians on their intelligent concern for animal welfare, as shown in the indignation over the recent kitten drowning and also the great support for the fine work of Mother Cecilia Mary at Good Shepherd Shelter.

You are humane people. You also are protecting yourselves. Cats and dogs are valuable to kill rats, ground squirrels, and other rodents. We know the grim fact that bubonic plague was brought from the Orient to California in the 19th century. Infected animals have spread over the entire West as far east as Alberta, and thus have created a reservoir of plague which could become a serious outbreak except for the vigilance of our various health agencies in the United States and Canada.

Wise Victorians—to cherish the dog and cat killers of rats, which can carry death to us humans—G. Hafner, Stockton, California.

Why Pick on U.S.

I have some sympathy for the cause of peace but those peach-marchers on Vancouver Island have forgotten a few things.

I do not recall any protest from those alleged pacifists when Hungary tried to shake off the yoke of Communism; when Russian troops slew thousands of Kurds, whose only crime was that they would not conform to Marx ideology; when China invaded Tibet crushing violently a people's bid for freedom and invaded the Indian border, both actions having a strong imperialistic flavour; and when Indonesia threatened the independence of Malaysia, raiding its borders, and when Egypt was going to destroy Israel.

Having deliberately overlooked acts of aggression by several powers, why pick on the United States of America as the "big bad wolf"?—The Critic.

Monetary Change

In the issue of the Times, Saturday, Aug. 28, under "Week in Business," the most interesting subject, in my estimation, was "Monetary Change Discussed"; now under discussion with the French government in Paris and G. George Bell, under-secretary of state, and Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler of the U.S.

The U.S. wants action to be based on the International Monetary Fund while France is most concerned with the question of international liquidity and some way of financing world trade.

At present, as the article mentions, it is only an exchange of views and examination of ideas, but the worship of the "Golden Calf," the gold standard of today, will have to give way to meet conditions of the world. Money can always be found to wage wars, and build atomic weapons; likewise, ways must be found to give food to countries that require it. Common sense, is it not?—Interested.

Overhead Hazard

New York Times

A FANTASTIC, terrifying—and yet in the present state of world affairs, a necessary—measure of arms preparedness was proclaimed by President Johnson in his news conference yesterday. The United States Air Force has been given the go-ahead signal to build military manned, orbiting laboratories.

On the assumption that the Russians have a similar technical capacity, the world from 1968 onward is going to have manned space ships flying around whose capacity for offense or defense will be formidable beyond previous imagination.

To be sure, the United States and the Soviet Union—and the way things are going, perhaps some other nations—will have the capacity to destroy each other and the world with nuclear missiles launched from earth any time the madness so moves them. But evidently the balance of terror would come unbalanced if one nation has MOL's, as they are referred to in space jargon, and another did not.

The United States Air Force has been demanding orbiting laboratories for years. The reason is essentially defensive. Such space laboratories could have the capacity to intercept and destroy enemy satellites. Their value for surveillance is obvious. As President Johnson said, they will provide "new knowledge about what man is able to do in space" and "will enable us to relate that ability to the defense of the nation."

The MOL's, however, will naturally be capable of offense as well as defense. It was therefore significant that President Johnson should have taken the opportunity to couple his announcement of the military decision with a new peaceful gesture toward Moscow for co-operation in the space program. He invited the Russians to watch the next launching of a Gemini space flight in October.

Looking Back

From The Times of Sept. 2, 1890:

Wellington: The armed guard sent here last month because of alleged incidents in the look-out of miners at Dunsmuir's coal mine has been reduced to six. At the same time, now that the open season for game is here, miners are able to procure a bountiful supply of all kinds of game. The fire in No. 3 mine continues and may prove difficult to put out. Some coal still is being dug from the mine with 845 tons being brought out in August.

They're Rolling Back The Gloom at Dawson

By GERALD WARING

DAWSON CITY, Y.T. — The last time I saw Dawson it was a dejected and dispirited city, full of romance of its past and gloom for its future.

That was in the summer of '63. The Dawson Festival the previous year had laid a monumental egg. The festival organization had a debt of nearly $250,000, and prospects of paying it off seemed slight.

Then, too, the town — its population of 30,000 during Klondike days shrunken to 500 — was living on limited time. The only large industrial employer, Yukon Consolidated Gold Corp. (300 men in summer, 75 in winter) was scheduled a permanent shut-down in 1966 because its huge dredges would then exhaust the workable creek bottom gravel.

When Yukon Consolidated quit, Dawson appeared likely to become completely a ghost town. It would have no economic reason for existence. Long since deprived of its status as territorial capital—government offices were moved to Whitehorse in 1953—Dawson would be left without even power or water. These are supplied by the gold mining company—power at 10 to 25 cents a KW, and heated water, so it won't freeze in the pipes in winter, at $12.50 per house per month.

That was Dawson City two years ago. The romance of '98 was everywhere, in boarded up saloons, hotels, blacksmith shops, in rusted locomotives sitting disconsolately in what passed for the town park, in the stern wheeler moored at the riverfront as a tourist attraction, in the plank sidewalks, and in the old-timers who remembered Dawson in its—and their—heydays, men like Black Mike, beard still black at 80-odd, who scorned Yukon Con's claim there was no gold left.

"You're walking on millions," he told me. Dawson is built on a bench of the Yukon River just down stream from the confluence of the Klondike River, the main stem of the gold creeks. And Black Mike believed, logically enough, that nuggets and dust washed down the Klondike over millions of years were under the townsite, overlooked by the '98ers and now irretrievable except at the cost of destroying the city.

What Dawson needed was new industry. High hopes that the tourist industry would supply the need had been dashed by the Festival's poor draw. Dawson seemed just too far from population centres. Socony Mobil had a trailer park at the end of town, headquarters for its oil drilling at Eagle Plain 200 miles north, but as yet not enough oil has been found to give Dawson a future as an oil city. And there was not even much optimism about Cassiar Asbestos' activity down river at Forty Mile—people said knowingly that Cassiar would sit on Forty Mile asbestos while it worked out its McDame Mountain mine in British Columbia.

Well, things have changed. The government picked up the tab on the festival deficit. Cassiar is putting in a $14 million installation at Forty Mile, which will become an economic satellite of Dawson. The government will take over power and water services after Yukon Con goes, putting in a modern plant to replace present worn out equipment. And there are so many people in Dawson this summer that you can hardly find a place to park your trailer or lay your head.

A lot of them are tourists. But a substantial number are prospectors, geologists and mining men spurred by government incentives and Cassiar's example to see if there's more than gold in them thar hills.

THE LAW RUNS AFOUL OF ITSELF

By PETER BUCKLEY

LONDON—The awful majesty of the law is having a tussle in England these days with the world of emancipated womanhood, and the law is losing.

The problem arises because Lord Gardiner, the lord chancellor who is in charge of appointments to the judiciary, has just named Judge Elizabeth Lane, 60, as the first woman high court judge in England's history.

When the announcement was made, officials in the lord chancellor's office put it about that the new member of Britain's highest court would be known as Mr. Justice Lane.

Since high court judges are always given a knighthood, the same officials said, she would also be Dame Elizabeth Lane. And in court she would be addressed as "Your Lordship."

Now the protests are coming in.

"Real estate operative we call it here, Wednesday. That estate agent sounds kind of funny here, sort of foreign, Wednesday."

"Huh? . . . Yes, well, yow and Oi know these darters. . . . Colored persons, Wednesday. We don't want to sound prejudiced, do we?"

"That these blacks loike living among their own, cooking their okra of what have yow and playing their steel tom-toms until three in the morning weethout ruining property value."

"You don't mind if I laugh at that, Wednesday? You see, we've had some property ruined around here just lately, yow know?"

"And another thing, Watts, Oi think yow'll agree with mee here, that the blacks find it difficult communicating weeth us. Oi can't understand a word some of them say. Do yow have the same problem?"

'What's Racket?'

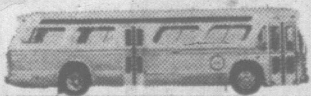

"Well, Wednesday, I think that's true up to a point here, I think . . . What's that racket, Madge honey? Those people in the street, huh? Excuse this interruption. We d n e s f i e l d, there seems to be some . . . CRASH! BANG! SMASH! Some kind of disturbance outside. KILL! KILL! BURN! LOOT! KILL! I'm really terribly sorry, Mr. Wednesday, KILL ALL WHITES! BURN! KILL! KILL! Madge, honey, call the fire department. Get under cover. Hello, Mr. Wednesday, on second thoughts, Mr. Wednesday, I think maybe they are beginning to make themselves understood."

U.K. Social Workers To Nudge Judges

By ROBERT G. KAISER

Just over 40 per cent of the serious crimes in this country in 1963—the last year for which statistics were available—were committed by juveniles.

Most juvenile crime here is directed against property, not persons. Less than a 10th of the 65,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 21 arrested in 1963 were charged with crimes of violence.

Family Council

The government white paper suggests that offenders under 16 be brought before a family council with their parents. It is hoped that the council, made up of social workers, teachers and others experienced with children, will reach agreement with offender and parents on suitable "punishment" without referring the offence to a court.

When the council cannot get agreement on the facts of a matter in question, the case will go before a special family court. But the family courts are expected to hear very few cases.

The white paper outlines three basic kinds of treatment for young delinquents: for minor offences and where appropriate, the youngster would be left in the custody of his parents; more serious offences would require three to six-month stints in newly-organized training schools; and the most serious breaches would bring long-term detention and training in specialized establishments.

The same basic pattern of punishment is outlined for delinquents between 16 and 21, though without provision for rehabilitation at home. Delinquents in this age group would be brought before young offenders courts, staffed by specially-qualified magistrates and judges.

For both age groups, the white paper says parents should be held liable for property damage caused by their children. The white paper does not propose to erase any juvenile crimes from a youngster's record. Any child over the age of 10 in Britain is held responsible for a crime he commits.

According to Alice M. Bacon, a junior minister in the Home Office, 1,000 new social workers would be required to staff the proposed family councils and follow up on juvenile cases.

Several newspapers editorialized that the family council plan was a weak one, for it took a traditionally legal matter—the question of depriving an individual of his liberty—out of the proven reliable courts.

The white paper itself disavows any desire to be lenient. "There is no intention," it says, "to deal lightly with young offenders—quite the contrary. What is needed is firm discipline and constructive treatment directed to the welfare or rehabilitation of the individual concerned."

RUSS USE OPINION POLLS

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J.—This is not a report of a survey but of a trip behind the Iron Curtain to discover how much interest there is in public opinion research in Russia and the kind and quality of methods employed to sample opinions there.

The trip, which was made by car, took us through Czechoslovakia and Poland to Moscow and Leningrad.

In recent years the Russians have displayed interest in public opinion research and it is now claimed by social scientists with whom we talked in Moscow that some 200 polling organizations are equipped to conduct surveys. These surveys are mostly local in character and no national poll—capable of covering the whole nation—is yet in existence.

FOCUS ON YOUTH

The Russians have an "Institute of Public Opinion" established by the youth organ, Komsomolskaya Pravda. To date some 12 surveys have been undertaken to learn more about the views of young people in Soviet Russia. Some of the same questions asked in national surveys made by the Gallup-Poll have been copied to get some indication of differences in attitudes.

SPECIAL PROBLEMS

The problems of polling in Russia are obviously great. More than one hundred different nationality groups are included among the Soviet Republics. Distances are enormous and communications bad. On some problems the Russians are willing to express their views freely and frankly, in fact they are urged by the government to do so. On other subjects, and particularly political issues of a sensitive nature, it is unlikely that true expressions of opinion would be registered.

OLD WILLOWBROOK WATTS STARTS TO GET THE MESSAGE

By STANLEY REYNOLDS

"The coloreds are different, they do not speak clearly. White people have difficulty understanding them." — A Birmingham estate agent interviewed on ABC's "Week-end" program.

In the interest of racial co-munications, Miscellany this week brings you a miscell-star, big TV-type, great confrontation hook-up, in which Mr. Wednesday-Smewick, a Birmingham estate agent, comes face to face with miscellstar with Mr. Willowbrook Watts, a Los Angeles real estate operative. Or is it Mr. Willowbrook Watts who confronts Mr. Wednesday-Smewick? We find it difficult distinguishing between the two. All estate agents look alike to us.

'My Speech Pattern'

"Well, hello there, Wednesday-Smewick in Birmingham, England, this is Mr. Watts here speaking to you from Los Angeles, California? And let me tell you, it is a very, very great honor and pleasure, indeed, to be speaking to you via miscellstar here tonight?"

"Oi seem to be having some trouble understanding yow, Meester Watts. Yow keep asking mee questions."

"Do I really? Gee, I guess that's just my speech pattern, Wednesday? Madge, Mrs. Watts, Wednesday, my wife, she's sitting here with me. And she says yow've got a darling little speech pattern, Wednesday."

"But, actually, Wednesday, I was looking forward to this symposium. I understand that you people in the Midland section have been experiencing difficulties lately with your colored persons, and that your government has taken definite steps to curb immigration."

They Weren't Asked

"Yes, it's a much belated step which meets with the wholehearted approval of the responsible elements of the white community. Yow see the British people are not prejudiced against white, black, red, or yellow, we have spread our English common law and way of loife to people all over the world, giving them the benefit of parliamentary democracy, cricket, and bagpipes without the slightest regard to race, creed, or color. But what Oi'd loike to say is: No one asked these coloreds to come here."

"Well, we didn't technically ever ask them to come here either, Wednesday. What's that, Madge? Excuse me, Wednesday, but Mrs. Watts is interrupting me. What's that, honey? Some people outside? Not now honey, I'm on miscellstar, OK? OK? Wednesday?"

"Oi wanted to say that yow and Oi, as estate agents. . . ."

'Sooner or Later' Four-Letter Words

LONDON — A new dictionary, which includes the "four-letter words," has been published by Penguin books. It is the firm's first venture in this field.

The new dictionary was compiled over the past seven years by a team headed by Professor G. N. Garmonsway, professor of English at King's College, London University, and one of his post-graduate students, Miss Jacqueline Simpson.

It is aimed at the general reader and costs $1.75. Professor Garmonsway said:

"It was rather a problem whether to include the 'four-letter words,' because to some extent we felt that if we did include them it might keep the dictionary out of schools. But there was also the fact to be faced that those words are being used in a number of serious journals and in modern literature. Sooner or later they would have to appear in a dictionary."

An entirely new phonetic scheme has been adopted by the professor as an aid to pronunciation.

Capsule, Masses of Jelly Protect Eggs of Snails, Slugs

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Thank you for your most interesting articles in the Times. We have been enjoying the very low tides at Witty's Lagoon and notice several types of gelatinous substances on the sandbar. Some are little egg shaped globules with an appendage that seems to anchor them to the sand. Some are just bright yellow masses and some are lacy ribbon-like yellow masses.

We would very much like to know what these are.

Dear F. T.,

The structures you describe are all molluscan egg-masses. Most of the marine snails and all the sea slugs or nudibranchs lay their eggs in groups protected by some type of capsule or simply in masses of jelly. Usually the size, form and color are quite distinctive so that with a little practice you can identify the source of the eggs at a glance.

The globular masses anchored to the sand by a short stalk are the eggs of the black bubble-snail, a curious-looking mollusc often found in beds of eel grass. Like most snails this one has a shell but in this case this structure is somewhat globular in shape and is covered by the fleshy mantle so that it looks like a bubble.

Bubble snails are carnivorous. Our species preys upon small types of clams which they engulf whole leaving a trail of cleaned shells to mark their wake. Egg masses are laid in the summer months and are sometimes attached to the bottom in areas adjacent to the feeding grounds. The eggs are covered by water except at the periods of lowest tides.

The brightly colored bands, particularly the lacy ribbon-like masses, are almost certainly the eggs of sea-slugs. These shell-less molluscs produce great numbers of eggs imbedded in strands of jelly attached to sea-weeds, rocks or on almost any submerged structure that will act as support.

As the ribbon-like mass is spewed out from the reproductive opening it is often placed in position by a weaving movement of the head which adds to the lacy appearance of the completed structure.

The dog-walkers or oyster-drills, the tritons and other conventional-looking snails lay their eggs in capsules, each one made of a parchment-like material and in a shape that is characteristic for each species. Some capsules are about the size and shape of a grain of wheat, some are like a small kernel of corn. All are attached to a support by a thin but tough stalk and they are often arranged in whorls or orderly ranks.

Even more curious is the egg-mass of our largest of all species, the moon snail. This mollusc with the grapefruit-sized shell imbeds its eggs in a sheet of mucus which becomes impregnated with sand to form a collar-like structure 6 to 7 inches in diameter. These incomplete circles of rubbery texture are often exposed on sand flats at low tides in late spring and summer and are common sources of wonder on the part of beachcombers at these times.

In most cases the eggs hatch into small larvae which are released from the jelly-mass to swim free in the ocean perhaps for many weeks until each animal develops a shell and settles down.

Encapsulated eggs, however, pass through this larval stage within their protective cover and emerge as miniatures of the parents. In some species the developing young feed upon each other while still within the capsule so that only the strongest or those that can eat the fastest succeed in hatching.

Island Girl Winner

The blondes of Norway have far-reaching charms. Blue-eyed Lene Graaten of Coombs, near Parksville, made the point Wednesday when she took the Miss PNE title in Vancouver.

The vivacious 19-year-old came out tops against strong competition from 27 other beauties from across B.C.

Lene, who has been in Canada nine years, cried for joy when the announcement was made.

Her first chore as reigning Miss PNE was to phone home to her parents and four younger brothers and sisters.

When the PNE ends Monday, the 5-foot, 1 1/2-inch beauty will return home for one short week.

Then she will be off to Nelson, where she has enrolled at the Kelowna School of Art.

A talented painter, she hopes to become a commercial artist after finishing her art school course.

This summer, Lene was valedictorian at Qualicum Beach High School.

She is the fourth Vancouver Island girl to take the title in the past 15 years. In 1963, Linda Douma of Sidney took the title, and then went on to become the current Miss Canada.

Cautious Okay Given Natural Gas Proposal

NORTH COWICHAN—Council Wednesday gave backing in principle to the idea of a natural gas supply to the area.

However, Reeve Donald Morton made it clear this action did not bind them to any future franchise.

John Montgomery of Cryogenic Enterprises Ltd., Vancouver, said his company is making an application to the Public Utilities Commission for a licence.

If successful, they will be back to ask 12 Vancouver Island municipalities for exclusive 20-year franchises.

The Cryogenic plan is to barge liquid gas from the mainland.

The project is scheduled for completion by September, 1966.

CAMPBELL RIVER—Campbell River and Sayward Chambers of Commerce will combine for special ceremonies Tuesday, Sept. 14 to mark completion of the new highway to Kelsey Bay.

Guest of honor will be highway minister P. A. Gagliardi.

Opening of the highway marks the first step in opening of the highway-ferry link to Prince Rupert and Alaska.

GOLD RIVER—Mill engineer Bruce Chisholm has been elected first reeve of the instant town being built here.

Mr. Chisholm, who presently works out of the Vancouver office of the Tahsis Co., but who will move here when building is complete, was unanimous choice of the interim council.

Also named Wednesday was the municipality's first paid official, clerk-treasurer-collector-assessor-approving officer, David Wilson.

New councillors are: Frank Grobb, sawmill manager; Donald Kilpatrick, assistant to Tahsis Co. president; Mrs. May Stewart, wife of assistant woods foreman; William Tymchuk, woods foreman; William Ford, logging superintendent.

LADYSMITH—A 1963 convertible was demolished in a crash near here Wednesday night.

Driver Wayne Morris Sutton, 24, of Kinnaird, appeared in court this morning and pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was fined $150 and had his driver's licence endorsed.

MARINA VILLAGE WINS APPROVAL

NORTH COWICHAN—A Calgary syndicate was given the green light Wednesday in its bid for a $360,000 development at Genoa Bay.

North Cowichan council unanimously rezoned 25 acres after facing a barrage of local protests against rezoning for a marina and mobile retirement village. A protest petition bore 95 signatures.

Lawyer Alistair MacDonald, on behalf of the syndicate, denied any intention to build an amusement complex.

Albert Bishop, Calgary electrical engineer and a member of the four-man syndicate, said the mobile home village would have 176 units.

The marina, fashioned after Thunderbird marina at Fisherman's Cove, Vancouver, would accommodate 100 cruisers and there would be off-street parking for 300 cars.

W. R. McIntyre, counsel for a number of the petitioners, said council should not indulge in patchwork zoning.

He said: "Surely council is not contemplating the Genoa Bay waterfront being built up the way it is at Cowichan Bay?"

Mr. MacDonald said the syndicate knew there would be no development if the health authorities could not be satisfied regarding the water supply and sewage disposal.

Council, sitting as a rezoning board, made a unanimous decision in committee.

Final approval of the development is contingent on complete assurances water and sewage facilities are satisfactory to health authorities.

COURTENAY PICKS PARK AS MEMORIAL PROJECT

COURTENAY—This up-Island city has chosen park development as its memorial to the Confederation Centenary in 1967.

As yet, though, it has made no concrete decisions on a specific project.

Among suggestions being looked at by the committee are: Development of a park along the banks of Puntledge River to link up with already existing Lewis Park.

Purchase of Indian reserve land adjoining Puntledge and building of a native house and trails.

Among other suggestions which have been rejected were a miniature railway in Lewis Park, a social centre for old-age pensioners and an indoor swimming pool and arts centre.

The centennial committee will have approximately $12,000 available from Courtenay and the immediate surrounding area and from federal-provincial grants.

LAWNS

By far the cheapest and best fertilizer for your lawn and shrubs is weedfree topsoil. If applied as a top-dresser (one yard for every 600 sq. feet, it will after three yearly applications develop a thick and lasting turf that feels like a soft carpet. That is how good and lasting lawns used to be made in the days not so long ago when we had not yet heard of chemical fertilizers. Topdressed lawns are, moreover, far less vulnerable to weeds and, most important of all, require less watering. One 50-lb. bag of chemical fertilizer costing $4.00 contains only 8 pounds of plant food. In comparison, you can buy for the same $4.00 2,500 pounds of weedfree topsoil, of which every pound helps to build up a good lawn.

When buying topsoil insist upon soil free of weeds and clay. The cost of dweeding is such that apart from the health hazards involved it does not pay to buy topsoil containing seeds of weeds.

Two inches of weedfree topsoil are also minimum requirements for making a good weedfree new lawn. For best quality topsoil that is free of weeds and clay, contact:

MEANWHILE—

Back at the Farm It Must Be Lonely

By HUMPHRY DAVY

It's roundup time on Vancouver Island. Cattle, sheep, goats and swine are being herded from farms as far north as Nanose Bay to compete in livestock competitions at the Saanichton Fair, Saturday and Monday.

According to fair manager Henry Robinson entries indicate it will be one of the largest livestock shows in years. Fifty additional stalls have been built to accommodate the cattle.

Dairy entries include 80 Holsteins, 70 Jerseys and 60 Ayrshires—the best of their kind on the Island.

Beef cattle total 105, the largest entry in this class in the 47-year-old history of the exhibition.

Sheep will also be well represented—at least 50—and an equal number of goats are expected.

All told, including horses and calves, about 800 head of livestock will be on exhibition.

There will be a special competition for the best display of cattle.

Points will be allotted for general neatness, grooming of animals and courtesy of attendants. The winner will receive a cash prize of $75, runnerup, $50; third, $35; fourth, $25, and fifth, $15.

But what has surprised fair officials most this year is the growing interest in the rabbit and pigeon shows. Entries have come from all parts of the province for competition against Saanichton exhibitors.

"Rabbits especially," said Mr. Robinson. "We have been deluged with entries."

FLORAL DISPLAY

In the horticultural hall competition is expected to be exceptionally keen, especially among exhibitors who specialize in flowers. A total of 70 exhibitors will enter late summer and fall blooms of all types in this section.

In the household arts and ladies work classes, many exhibitors are showing their work for the first time.

Entries in the children classes—cooking, crafts and hobbies—are also above average this year.

The fair, like in other years, will have plenty of side attractions for young and old.

One of these will be square dancing by groups of 4-H members on the green under floodlights. This will take place at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

PIONEER MUSEUM

Another attraction, sometime overlooked by visitors, is the Saanichton pioneer museum which has one of the finest collection of farm relics on Vancouver Island.

Highland dancing, starting at 10 a.m. Monday, is another event.

Chief Edwin Underwood and members of the East Saanich reserve will also display Indian relics and handicrafts.

They will also run a salmon barbecue for the two days.

The horse show, new established as one of the best in British Columbia, has attracted riders from all parts of the province.

Competitions will start Saturday at 10 a.m. with junior events. The senior western events will be held Sunday and the English on Monday.

The 4-H Club competitions will take place mainly Monday.

BRIBE HASSLE

Singapore Bids For Neutrals

By JOHN CANTWELL

SINGAPORE (AP) — Why did Singapore's Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew drag up bribery and spy charges against the United States this week — some 4½ years after the incidents occurred?

Two theories appear to be gaining support among political observers in this newly-independent country.

One view is that Lee, worried by the small number of African and Asian countries that have recognized his government, made the anti-American charges to prove that he is not a "neo-colonialist stooge."

The other theory is that the United States has been putting pressure on Lee since Singapore separated from Malaysia to declare that he is in the anti-Communist camp. Such a move by Lee would end his chances of being recognized as a neutral by the African and Asian nations.

Observers here generally give more support to the first view than the second.

Some also noted that Lee appears to be worried by the illness of someone close to him and that he is under tremendous strain to reorganize his government since separation from Malaysia.

During a televised press conference Tuesday he said the U.S. government had offered him a $3,000,000 bribe not to reveal that a Central Intelligence Agency operative had been caught and arrested for trying to buy state secrets.

DENIAL IN ERROR

The U.S. state department issued a formal denial of Lee's charges. But after Lee produced a letter of apology written by State Secretary Dean Rusk, it said the denial was in error.

The letter, written April 15, 1961, apologized because "certain U.S. government officials" had been engaged in "improper activities in Singapore."

Although Lee, 42, rode to power with the support of Communists, he is generally believed to be anti-Communist.

But he apparently believes that if his small country is to survive after being separated from Malaysia, it must co-exist with the growing numbers of neutral African-Asian countries.

Lee's security police last week broke up and arrested a Communist plot to overthrow the government and establish a Communist state.

Lee, a graduate of Cambridge University, claims to be a democratic socialist. But his socialist leanings are mild.

Congress Asks Explanation For Denial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional committee today called on the state department and Central Intelligence Agency to explain why a formal denial of a $3,000,000 bribery incident that took place in Singapore in 1960 backfired to the embarrassment of the U.S. government.

Representative Clement J. Zablocki (Dem. Wis.), chairman of the House of Representatives foreign affairs subcommittee on the Far East, said closed hearings will be held after the Labor Day recess to hear an explanation from responsible officials on bribery allegations brought by Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

Lee threatened to name an American presidential intermediary of high rank who he said offered him the bribe in 1960 if he would not reveal the arrest of an American CIA agent trapped trying to buy information from Singapore secret agents.

RELEASED RUSK LETTER

State department officials were taken aback Tuesday when Lee released a letter from State Secretary Dean Rusk which apologized for improper activities by American agents and promised disciplinary action.

Zablocki said it was "most unfortunate" that the state department had issued a formal denial of the bribery charge Tuesday and then had to reverse itself Wednesday.

State department officials insisted that only Rusk and the Central Intelligence Agency knew of the letter to Lee. Zablocki indicated that Congress had been filled in on the incident when it occurred toward the close of the Eisenhower administration.

Administration authorities said U.S. Ambassador James D. Bell in Kuala Lumpur will meet soon with the Singapore prime minister to discuss problems between the two countries. Consideration also is being given to naming an ambassador to the newly-independent island state.

TALKS SET

U.K. Workers Straggle Back

LONDON (Reuters)—Prospects for Britain's strike-ridden auto industry took a turn for the better Wednesday with a gradual return to work and an announcement union and management representatives will confer Friday with Prime Minister Wilson.

The announcement from the prime minister's office said Wilson and Labor Minister Ray Gunter have invited them to discuss "the facts of the situation following recent disputes affecting production."

At the same time, workers at a factory in Llanelli, Wales, who make components for the huge British Motor Corporation, returned to work after an 11-day strike which caused nearly 20,000 BMC workers to be laid off.

The Llanelli men returned pending negotiations on their complaint about the firing of a workman who refused to take orders from a foreman he considered unqualified.

In Coventry, 50 workers at a factory making felt for car insulation, who struck over the dismissal of a girl alleged to have spent too long in the rest room, resumed work Wednesday pending an independent investigation.

AGREE ON FORMULA

Meanwhile a peace formula was agreed upon here Wednesday night on a strike of 300 car delivery drivers which shut down the U.S.-owned Ford Motor Company factory at Halewood in northwest England for two weeks.

After seven hours of talks, union and management representatives agreed that the dispute—over dismissal of a man convicted of dangerous driving—should go to an industrial court for arbitration.

The unions said they will recommend a return to work by the men, whose strike caused a pile-up of new cars for lack of parking space and led to the factory's shutdown. A Ford spokesman said the outcome of the talks was a hopeful sign for a resumption of work by 8,000 men laid off because of the dispute.

JAPAN FIRM CONTROLS NEW MINE SYNDICATE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Nippon Mining Co. Ltd. of Japan and Peel Resources Ltd. announced Wednesday the formation of a syndicate to explore and develop a 48-claim copper property near Merritt.

Nippon, one of the world's largest copper producers, has a 60-per-cent holding and will be operator of the group to be known as the Cinderella Mining Syndicate.

The Japanese firm is committed to spend $225,000 on the property over the next two years and must spend $150,000 on the project before it can elect to continue or suspend operations.

B.C. Enjoying Boom in Shipments

OTTAWA (CP)—British Columbia and Nova Scotia have outstripped the national average and even industrially opulent Ontario in one important sector of business during the current boom.

As measured by the value of shipments of all manufacturing industries, Nova Scotia has gained 49 per cent and British Columbia 47 per cent since early 1961, when the country was in its last economic slump.

By comparison, Ontario's advance has been 44 per cent, Quebec's 32 per cent, and the national total 39 per cent.

Latest statistics cover the first five months of 1965 and show total manufacturing industry shipments amounting to $13,302,581,000 for all Canada.

In the first five months of 1961, when most economic indicators were at their low point following the boom of 1959 and early 1960, the comparable figure was $9,578,066,000.

In the same four-year period, shipments of all manufacturing industries in Nova Scotia have made virtually a three-to-two gain to $215,068,000 from $144,495,000, and British Columbia advanced by almost the same margin to $1,163,051,000 from $790,255,000.

The smallest gain was made by Saskatchewan, up 10.5 per cent to $159,958,000 from $144,700,000, even though not widely regarded as a manufacturing province.

Statistics for 1965 in the other western provinces with change from 1961 in brackets are: Manitoba, $388,353,000 (up 33 per cent from $289,048,000) and Alberta, $475,714,000 (up 27 per cent from $375,685,000).

Your furnace needs a check-up: call your Esso Home Heat serviceman

You, your car and your furnace are three mechanisms that benefit from regular check-ups. By an expert. As far as your heating equipment is concerned, look where you will, you can't find a more expert expert than your Esso Home Heat serviceman. Imperial Oil insists that it shall be so. By selecting the best service people in the business (we originated this service, so we had our pick of the crop). By training our servicemen in our own home-heating schools. By insisting that each man keep a complete "case history" of every furnace under his care (your psychiatrist couldn't be more thorough). Your Esso Home Heat serviceman will arrange for your furnace's annual check-up at a time when weather conditions in your area make it most appropriate and convenient. Result: efficient, economical, worry-free home heat, day-in day-out (and at night, too)—guaranteed by Imperial Oil. No wonder you have that nice warm feeling when you use Esso Home Heat Service.

New Firms, Not Branch Advocated

CHETWYND, B.C. (CP)—Premier Bennett has urged foreign companies doing business in B.C. to establish new firms instead of branch offices here.

He said the firms would come within jurisdiction of all provincial laws and regulations.

The premier made his remarks in an interview at this town 60 miles west of Dawson Creek. He is touring the Peace River area and will return to Victoria Friday.

He said his trip to Britain and Italy, which begins Sept. 13, could include unofficial side trips to other European nations.

He said he will meet with top Italian government officials in Rome and tour the heavily-industrialized north, where transmission towers for B.C. Hydro and Power Authority lines are being built.

Wages Show Small Boost

OTTAWA (CP)—Wages and salaries paid to workers in June amounted to $2,124,000,000, a gain of nearly three per cent from May, the bureau of statistics reported today.

The June figure brought labor income for the first half of 1965 to $11,872,000,000, more than 10 per cent greater than in the first half of last year.

The total—which does not include supplementary labor income, such as payments by employers to pension, welfare, workmen's compensation, and unemployment insurance funds—is a significant indicator of national incomes.

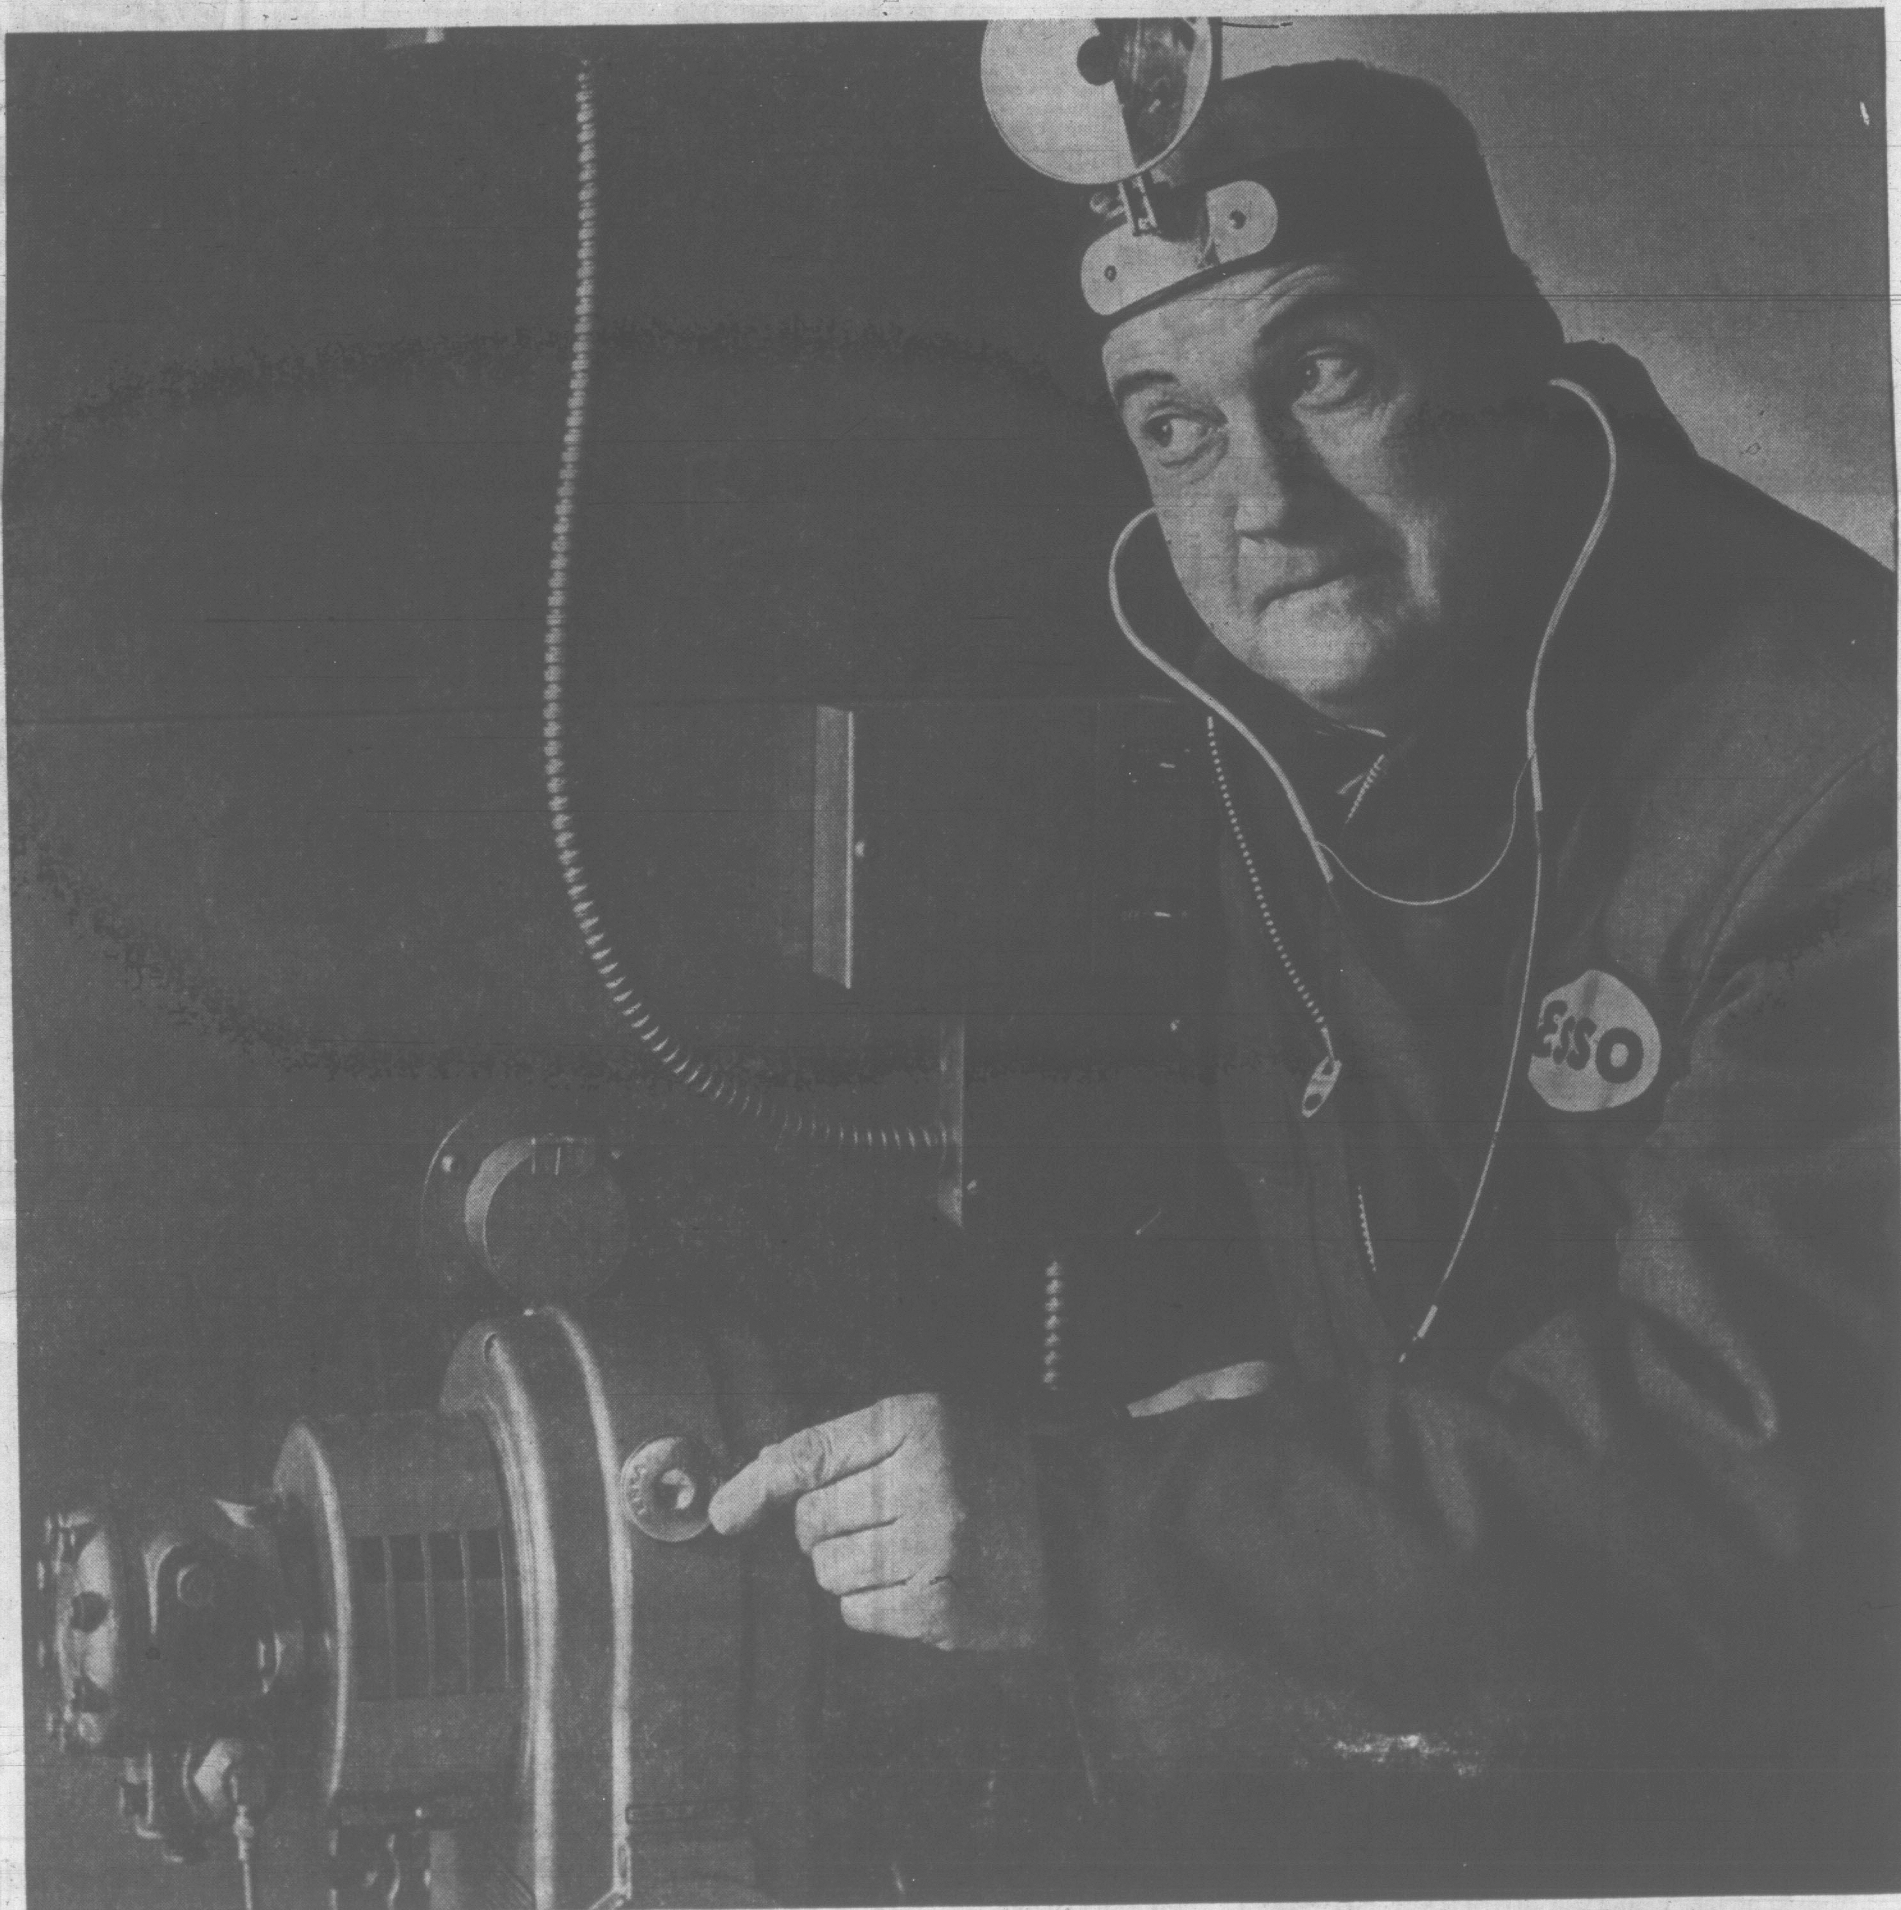

The six-months totals for this year, by provinces, compared with six-months totals for last year, in brackets, were: Newfoundland, $177,000,000 ($158,000,000); Nova Scotia, $323,000,000 ($297,000,000); New Brunswick, $246,000,000 ($223,000,000); Quebec, $3,198,000,000 ($2,896,000,000); Ontario, $5,009,000,000 ($4,542,000,000); Manitoba, $515,000,000 ($482,000,000); Saskatchewan, $367,000,000 ($343,000,000); Alberta, $791,000,000 ($708,000,000); British Columbia, $1,281,000,000 ($1,128,000,000).

B.C. Willing To Pay Share

DAWSON CREEK (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett said Wednesday the provincial government is still willing to pay one-third the cost of paving the Alaska Highway.

Speaking at a testimonial dinner in his honor, he also told 400 representatives of local chambers of commerce that they must do everything to expand their tourist trade.

"This is a resource that contributes to, but is not a drain upon, the local community," he said.

Middle-of-Road Man Dominican Chief

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ
SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The Dominican Republic's next president is a debonair lawyer-diplomat who hopes to serve as a buffer between the country's conservative and liberal factions.

"I believe there is a real need for broadening that middle ground where conservatives and liberals can work harmoniously for the common good," said Hector Garcia-Godoy.

He takes office Friday for a nine-month term as provisional president.

The provisional period, critics argue, is too short for a political professional to produce satisfactory results and dangerously long for an inexperienced optimist.

Actually, Garcia-Godoy, 44, brings a lot of administrative experience to an office many believe needs a temporary respite from politics.

Awareness of this is probably why Garcia-Godoy has selected a team of ministerial aides—still undisclosed—with little or no direct connection with Dominican politics of the past.

"We have to try to bring the extremes closer to each other," he told an interviewer.

One thing Garcia-Godoy won't lack during his term is critics. Nationalist diehards bitterly resentful of U.S. intervention call him a "collaborationist traitor."

He replies: "Someone had to do something, whatever the sacrifices, to bring an end to this hopeless situation."

Garcia-Godoy began his diplomatic career in 1944. That same year he received his law degree from the University of Santo Domingo.

In the ensuing 19 years, he moved to banking and back to diplomacy, terminating as ambassador to London in 1963 when President Juan Bosch named him foreign minister. He is on leave from the vice-presidency of the Compania Anonima Tabacalera, the country's biggest cigarette and cigar manufacturer.

'FANTASTIC'

Hero's Welcome

CLEVELAND (AP)—Robert Manry, who sailed alone across the Atlantic in his 13½-foot boat, was "overwhelmed" by a hero's welcome when he returned home today.

"It's just fantastic," the skipper of the Tinkerbelle told a police-estimated crowd of 15,000 at public square following a parade downtown from Cleveland Hopkins International airport.

"I never knew it would be like this when I got back to Cleveland. This is the greatest honor I have ever received in my life."

Manry was presented a key to the city by Mayor Ralph S. Locher.

Referring to the welcome, the 47-year-old newspaper man said: "This is a first experience and I'm a little bit nervous looking out over this sea of faces, I'm afraid."

Thomas Vail, publisher and editor of The Plain Dealer where Manry is a copyreader, was master of ceremonies for the ceremony, which was followed by a civic luncheon.

Western Golf Pros Set Toronto Pace

TORONTO (CP)—Only four golfers from Western Canada entered the 1965 Macnaughton Brooks bursary tournament, but two of them Wednesday showed the large Ontario and Quebec field how to play.
 Wilf Homenuk of Winnipeg led the qualifiers with a five-under-par 67 and Bill Wakeham of Calgary and formerly of Victoria, came in with a 68.

 Only one Ontario golfer, Alvie Thompson of Toronto, is up with the leaders. He also fired a 68.
 The 54-hole tournament for Canadian professionals under 30 years being played over Toronto's 6,387-yard, par-72 Don Valley Golf Club, winds up today with 36 holes.
 The other westerners competing were Stan Homenuk of Dauphin, Man., who qualified with 75 and Ed Engelhardt of Calgary, who missed the cutoff with 81.

Minnesota Twins Have A Magic Number—21

'Shake Perkins, More Passes' Grant's Theme

WINNIPEG (CP) — "Shake the fullback to the outside... more long passes..."

Coach Bud Grant was making mental plans to sharpen Winnipeg Blue Bombers' offense for tonight's Western Football Conference game with British Columbia Lions.

He isn't happy with the unit's production of seven touchdowns in five games.

"We just can't get out of our end with the big second down play," he said. "We have to be able to put together two or three first downs."

A charging defensive corps took up the slack to spark Bombers to victory in their first four games of the season but when the defenders slowed down Winnipeg was a 25-6 victim to Saskatchewan Roughriders.

AFTER FIRST PLACE

In a bid to perk up the offense as Bombers go after sole possession of first place—they share it now with Calgary Stampede—Grant plans more work for fullback Art Perkins, flanker Billy Cooper and end Norm Rauhaus.

"We like to try to shake Perkins outside, and we'll do more of it," Grant said as he prepared to send Bombers in search of a victory over the defending champion Lions.

"I'd like to see the fullback carrying eight or nine times, and our three ball-carriers should average nine or ten carries per game."

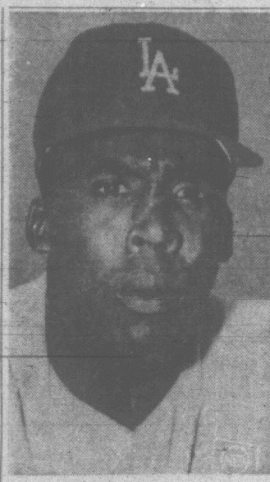

He said he would also like to see more long passes. "Both Cooper and Rauhaus are capable of getting them."

ARGOS PREFERRED

Grant admits there's one stumbling block to his plans succeeding when the non-televized contest kicks off at 6 p.m. PDT — Lions have the stingiest defence in the league. They have given up less than 12 points a game.

"Too bad it couldn't be the Argonauts," Bud said.

B.C., with five points earned in five games, will be minus defensive tackle Gus Kasapis in going after a share of third place with Saskatchewan. Kasapis strained knee ligaments when Lions trounced Toronto 36-1 Sunday and will be replaced by Roy Shatzko, rookie from the University of B.C.

JOHN ROSEBORO

GIANTS, TOO

Bat Catcher Sues Swinger

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Catcher John Roseboro of Los Angeles Dodgers said Wednesday night that he is suing Juan Marichal and San Francisco Giants as a result of the pitching star's bat-swinging attack 10 days ago.

Roseboro, here for the Dodgers' series against Pittsburgh Pirates, issued a statement in which he said he had instructed his Los Angeles attorney to institute the suit against Marichal and the Giant organization "for the unprovoked attack made upon me at Candlestick Park on Aug. 22."

In Los Angeles, Roseboro's attorney, Leo Branton, Jr., said a complaint had been filed in Superior Court against Marichal and the Giants, asking $10,000 in general damages and $100,000 in exemplary and punitive damages.

Marichal said "I wish I had that much, half that much, quarter that much."

In the explosive brawl, Marichal struck Roseboro on the head with a bat-opening a two-inch gash.

Warren Giles, National League president, suspended Marichal for eight playing days and fined him $1750. The suspension ended Wednesday night.

In his statement, Roseboro said he was bringing legal action not only because of the attack, but also because Marichal "set a bad example for millions of baseball fans" and because Marichal has "attempted to defend and justify his outrageous conduct" in recent statements.

Marichal has said he was provoked into the fight with Roseboro.

Streaking Pirates Jerk Lead Out From Under L.A.

UPI

Minnesota Twins have reached the point where they have a realistic "magic number" which will clinch their first American League pennant.

It's 21 and it means that any combination of Minnesota victories and Chicago White Sox or Baltimore Orioles losses which total 21 will clinch the flag for the Twins.

The "magic number" to eliminate Cleveland Indians is 19 and the number that will end it all for Detroit Tigers is 18.

Here's how the magic number works in practical terms:

If the Twins win 14 of their remaining 27 games, the White Sox would have to win 23 of their last 29 games to tie.

Assuming the same 14-13 pace for the Twins, the Orioles would have to win 27 of their final 33 games to tie.

Again giving the Twins that 14-13 closing pace, the Indians would have to take 26 of 30 and the Tigers 26 of 29 to tie.

The inexorable countdown toward a Minnesota pennant continued Wednesday night when the Twins beat the Tigers 5-2 while the White Sox and Orioles were rained out and the Indians lost to the Kansas City Athletics 4-3. That gave the Twins an eight-game lead over the White Sox, a 10-game lead over the Orioles, a 10½-game margin over the Indians and an 11-game bulge over the Tigers.

Washington Senators shaded Boston Red Sox 8-7 and Los Angeles Angels topped New York Yankees 7-6 in 12 innings in other A.L. action.

Jim Perry went eight innings to win his ninth game for the Twins with ninth-inning relief help from Al Worthington. The Twins went off to a 3-0 lead in the first inning with a double by Tony Oliva and a single by Earl Battey the key blows and added single tallies in the third and sixth innings.

Jose Cardenal singled home Bob Rodgers with two out in the 12th to give the Angels their victory over the Yankees, who dropped two games under .500 and 18½ games out of first place. The blow came off Pedro Ramos. The Yankees committed seven errors.

ACES KNOCKED OFF

Pittsburgh Pirates are through helping the other National League contenders catch up. Now they have their own designs on the pennant.

The streaking Pirates, who have captured 10 of their last 11 games, jerked the league lead out from under Los Angeles Wednesday night by beating Dodger ace Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, enabling Cincinnati Reds to take over first place.

By whipping the Dodgers twice, 3-2 in 11 innings and 2-1, the fifth-place Pirates moved within 2½ games of the top and hurled the NL race into a chaotic state rivaling the 1964 stretch drive. Even seventh-place St. Louis was left only eight games behind in the wake of the benevolent Pirates' sweep.

Cincinnati came from behind in the ninth inning of the first game for a 7-6 verdict over the Braves, then blanked Milwaukee 2-0 on the five-hit hurling of Jim Maloney, putting the Reds on top by one percentage point.

The Cardinals shut out Chicago 9-0, New York whipped Houston 4-1, then lost an 8-5 decision to the Astros in the second game.

San Francisco at Philadelphia was postponed because of rain and rescheduled as part of a doubleheader today.

HELMS BIG HELP

The Pirates handed Koufax his third straight loss with a two out walk in the 11th followed by Jim Pagan's run-scoring double then trumped Drysdale, who hasn't beaten a first division team in six weeks, with two singles in the eighth and a ground ball which shortstop Maury Wills booted.

Koufax, as expected, broke his own National League strike-out record of 306, fanning 10 Pirates to increase his season's total to 313—just six short of Bob Feller's major league mark. The Dodger southpaw allowed eight hits as he failed for the fifth time to win his 22nd game. He is 21-7.

Luckies Add Bullen For Kelowna Tourney

Victoria Luckies, led by coach Ed Senin, will head for Kelowna to compete for the B.C. men's senior B softball tournament, scheduled for the Labor Day weekend.

METS JUST LOVE THAT DUST

Looking more as if they were on the plains of Oklahoma than on Shea Stadium diamond in New York, shortstop Eddie Kasko of Houston Astros and base-umpire John Pryor hold onto caps and protect faces from dust storm that swirled around them in sixth inning of National League game Wednesday. Kasko had reached second base on double. Mets seemed to like dust and scored one of their occasional victories by beating Astros 4-1 in first game of doubleheader. (AP Wirephoto)

Brampton Belle Barely Beaten

DU QUOIN, Ill. (CP)—Egyptian Candor edged Canada's Ambro Flight by a neck to win the 40th Hambletonian Stakes in a three-horse race-off forced Wednesday night by the plucky Canadian-bred filly.

Ambro Flight's victory in the third heat of the best-of-three event, over Egyptian Candor in the day's fastest time of 2:03.43 for the mile, forced the final race with Short Stop to decide the winner of the $122,245 prestige harness racing tournament.

The race-off was only the fourth in the history of the meeting for three-year-olds.

The Canadian horse, unbeaten in her last 22 outings, led through the final in a two-horse race after Short Stop, winner of the first heat, broke stride.

Ambro Flight, owned by Ted and Charles Armstrong of Brampton, Ont., battled down the stretch only to lose out as charging Egyptian Candor, owned by Mrs. Rachel Dancer of New Egypt, N.J., nudged by on the outside.

O'BRIEN PRAISES HORSE

The filly's driver, Joe O'Brien, 45, a native of Alberton, P.E.I., seeking his third Hambletonian victory, had nothing but praise for his horse in the heavy going.

The clay mile oval at the Du Quoin state fair grounds was made soggy by 24 hours of rain which forced postponement of the race for almost three hours while crews worked on the surface.

The track was blamed by several drivers for the upset of favored Noble Victory and Ambro Flight, the second choice, Egyptian Candor, driven by Del Cameron, earned $59,500 with finishes of fifth, first and second in the three heats.

Ambro Flight, Canada's Harness Horse of 1964, placed sixth, third and first and won $29,500. Short Stop's share was $14,376.

The surprise of the meet was Noble Victory, owned by K. D.

Ride on Meadow Court Awaits Lester Piggott

JOE O'BRIEN came close

LONDON (CP)—The possibility increased Wednesday that Lester Piggott, this year's leading British jockey, will ride Meadow Court in the £40,000 ($120,000) St. Leger Handicap at Doncaster Sept. 8.

Piggott, British champion in 1964 and Meadow Court's rider in its last three outings, is still committed to ride Bally Russe, a 100-to-1 shot owned by Noel Murless of Newmarket, England. But indications are Murless will scratch his colt during the weekend on the basis of a poor run two weeks ago.

One of London's leading bookmakers predicts only nine of the 23 horses still entered in the 1 1/4-mile race, the last of the five British classics, will reach the starting gate. Bally Russe is not included in the list.

Paddy Prendergast, Meadow Court's veteran trainer, said in a telephone interview from his home at Carragh, Ireland, Wednesday he would know by the weekend whether Piggott would be available. He declined to name any other riders he has in mind if Bally Russe does not run.

Meadow Court, "winner of more than £105,000 ($315,000) in five starts this year, will be watched at the Yorkshyre track by his co-owners, Calgary publisher Max Bell, Vancouver oilman Frank McMahon and singer Bing Crosby. They are expected to decide then whether the chestnut colt will run in the Prix de l'Anc de Triomphe in Paris in October.

Prendergast said the colt is in "top condition" and should have no trouble with the distance.

Button Match Tied

Uplands challengers, Jack Betts and John Martin finished all square with Gorge Vale senior golf button holders, Moke Morgan and Clare Mitchell, at Victoria Golf Club. The match will be replayed next week.

Ontario Swingers Keep on Winning

BRANTFORD (CP)—The four Ontario golfers who captured the interprovincial team championship Tuesday, continued their winning ways Wednesday in the opening round of match play for the Canadian Junior championship.

The team leader, Graham Cooke of Cooksville, whose 36-hole score of 147 was best in the qualifying round, easily defeated Ray Briddon of Toronto 6 and 5 to advance to today's second round. Cooke is the 1965 Ontario junior champion.

The other members of the Ontario team had a more difficult time in winning. Jim Short of Toronto eliminated Alec Lockington of Dundas, Ont., 2 and 1; John Nugent, also of Toronto, edged Peter Lago of Guelph 1 up, and Ian Thomas of London, Ont., defeated John

Gaps Aplenty Face Frank

VANCOUVER (CP)—Coach Frank Gnuip put 53 candidates through two light workouts this week as the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds opened training for the 1965 season.

The team travels to Southern Oregon College for its first game Sept. 25, then plays Saturday dates against Canadian and United States squads until Nov. 6.

Coach Gnuip, line coach Harvey Scott and assistant coach Roy Jukanovitch are faced with the problem of replacing the entire 1964 backfield which has been lost through graduation or ineptibility.

And Soviet undersea craft have been pushing out beyond their customary waters.

Navy officers said the wider-ranging Soviet submarine operations reflect the larger number of long endurance craft, including atomic-powered vessels, now in the Soviet sub flotillas.

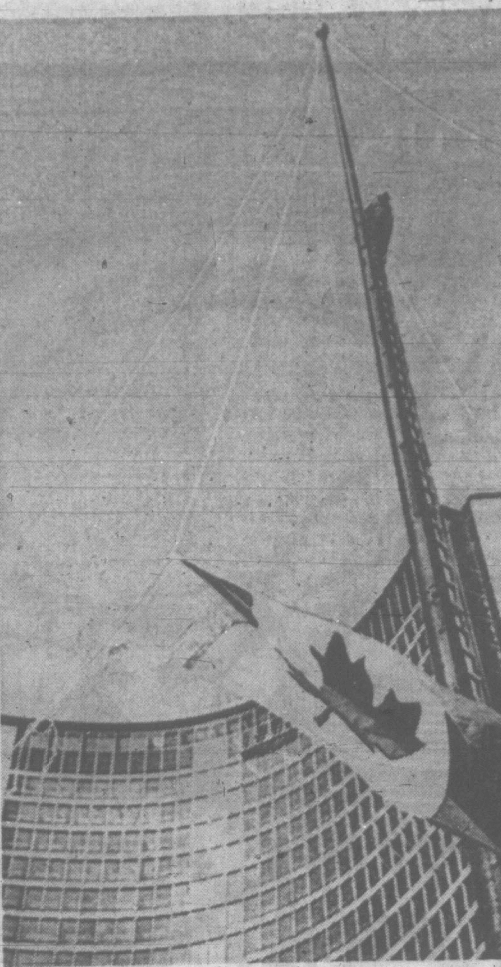

Over all, the Soviet submarine force numbers about 400—a figure which has remained fairly constant in recent years.

REPLACE OLD SUBS

However, longer-range craft have been taking the place of many relatively short-range coastal subs which used to make up a sizable part of the Russian undersea fleet.

Vice Admiral Charles B. Martell, "czar" of the navy anti-submarine warfare program, told reporters Tuesday the Russians have sent to sea about 150 new, long-endurance subs in the past five to 10 years. This is about the size of the entire U.S. submarine force. But 51 of the U.S. boats are atomic-powered, compared with some 30 Russian nuclear-propelled craft.

And Martell, while acknowledging that the Russians "are certainly working to get a Polaris capability," indicated he doubts Russia yet has managed to pull abreast of the U.S. Navy's ability to fire missiles from below the surface of the seas.

HARLOW
Adult Entertainment
Royal Theatre

This is the second of two recent films purporting to tell the story of Hollywood's most luminous love goddess of the 1930s, and frankly I do not find either of them truly satisfying.

But the second, produced by Joseph E. Levine with Carroll Baker as Jean Harlow, is a distinct improvement on Bill Sargent's Electronvision production shown in Victoria last May.

Producer Levine and director Gordon Douglas have captured the pre-war Hollywood atmosphere with glamor and effect and Carroll Baker is poignantly alluring as the elusive Harlow.

To me the most unsatisfying aspect of the film is the handling of Harlow's tragic marriage to studio executive Paul Bern. It is a role which few could play with conviction and Peter Lawford is not one of the few.

According to Harlow's biographer Irving Shulman, Paul Bern's impotence made a nightmare out of their wedding night. The unsavory details are tastefully glossed over, but I found the behavior of the principals theatrical and unconvincing.

On the credit side, Red Buttons is a powerhouse as Harlow's agent and Raf Vallone stands out as her impecunious step-father. Angela Lansbury, Wednesday.

always a competent actress, makes of Harlow's mother a sadly appealing personality.

The script by John Michael Hayes seems to avoid the biographical statement that Harlow's last co-star was Clark Gable and her last love William Powell.

Her most consistent lover in the film is a screen actor played by Michael Connors who bears no resemblance to either.

As in the biography, Harlow embarks on a life of drink and dissipation after her husband commits suicide and dies at the height of her fame, a victim of the times and her insatiable appetite for life.

The earlier sequences are perhaps more interesting. She is a lowly extra when agent Red Buttons takes her under his wing and places her in a variety of comedies calling for beauty rather than talent.

Later she is given the feminine lead in the once-famous war movie Hell's Angels but still reveals little acting ability. It is on her beauty alone that she wins universal acclaim as the sex symbol of the 30s.

Poor Harlow!

CIGARETTE SMOKERS' DEATH RISK SOARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette smoking is described as one of the greatest health hazards of the century in a new leaflet prepared by the U.S. Public Health Service.

And, the leaflet adds, "It is a hazard entirely preventable by a personal decision not to smoke."

The emphasis is on cigarette smoking and the rapid increase in deaths from chronic bronchitis and emphysema. But, the leaflet concluded:

"Chronic bronchitis and emphysema, however, are only part of the story. The risk of death from all causes is 70 per cent higher for cigarette smokers than for non-smokers."

Prepared for the general public, the leaflet is being distributed to state education and public health officials.

Adventists Open Hillside School

Hill Memorial, an elementary day school operated by Victoria Seventh-Day Adventist Church at 1462 Hillside, opened Wednesday with an enrolment of 25 students.

"We are one of the city's smaller educational units," says G. Kenneth Walton, principal. "Our curriculum matches that of the public school, with the important addition of daily religious instruction."

"We also try to give a spiritual slant to other school subjects where possible."

Extra-curricular instruction in handicrafts and nature study is given through the school's Pathfinder organization.

WEATHER—WET, GLOOMY

U.S. WAR FILM SPARKS UPROAR

BERLIN (Reuters)—A West Berlin movie house Wednesday broke off the performance of an American war film entitled Command in Viet Nam after a large group of young people loudly protested against the film police said the demonstrators "abouted 'Stop it' and 'Put an end to this murder.' The theatre was cleared by police.

of the ocean, but they do: Wet and gloomy.

There are other factors in the climate, too — changes in temperature of the water and in direction and speed of currents — all of which have a bearing on how well the navy divers and scientists can function at their depth of 205 feet 1,000 yards off the southern California coast.

The 10 aquanauts who began living in the house trailer-sized underwater laboratory Saturday started setting up a "weather station" Wednesday 175 feet from Sealab 2.

With the weight of the ocean

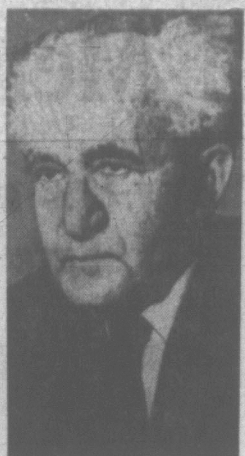

on their bodies creating a pressure six times that at the surface, they expect it will take four or five men two days to complete the fairly simple task.

Others will continue hooking up their 12-by-58-foot steel cylinder abode with an underwater communications centre which will expand the number of telephone and television channels to the mother ship on the surface.

This task is expected to require 24 manhours, maybe more.

A navy spokesman said each man averaged more than 47 minutes of outside work Tuesday and this is expected to increase daily to two or more hours.

Inside they are busy with research projects, such as cataloging marine life in the area, and measuring their own heart beat and brain wave patterns to see if there are any changes due to the stress of living in an underwater world.

Professor Wins Fight For Academic Freedom

By JOHN KOLEBAR

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)—"Those of you who know me know that I am a Marxist and a socialist. Therefore... I do not fear or regret the impending Viet Cong victory in Viet Nam. I welcome it."

With those words by a Rutgers University professor at a Viet Nam "teach-in" April 23, a chill wind from the cold war blew into New Jersey's election campaign.

State Senator Wayne Dumont Jr., an underdog Republican candidate for governor seeking to end 12 years of Democratic reign, charged a state university had no right to keep on its payroll a professor who expressed such sentiments.

The University board of governors made two reviews of the criticism of Prof. Eugene Genovese, 35, and refused to fire him. It said he kept his political views out of his history classes.

Democratic Governor Richard J. Hughes, favored to win re-election after his upset victory four years ago, refused to overrule the board of governors. Academic freedom prevented it, he said.

PROBE INCONCLUSIVE

A two-man legislative committee made an inconclusive investigation. Then followed letters to editors, resolutions by veterans organizations, and formation of committees for and against Genovese or academic freedom.

The centre of the controversy is a professor who had admitted being a teen-aged Communist. He said he was expelled by the party in 1950 a few months before the Korean War started and had signed the standard non-subversive oath required of state university professors.

Two years ago he wrote a book review criticizing a Communist author for a retreat from Marxism. A party organ retorted by accusing Genovese of being opposed to peaceful coexistence, accepting nuclear war and of generally favoring Red China and Albania over Russia.

Dumont cited the editorial as proof Genovese, who has been reluctant to say anything in the controversy, retorted that Dumont was repeating false statements originated by the Communists.

YOUTH CORPS HASSLE

Reprimand Follows Official's Remarks

OTTAWA (CP)—The Company of Young Canadians has been caught up in a controversy over remarks by one of its officials.

The comments, amounting to a promise that the still-unborn company will appeal to the country's more radical student elements, have raised a number of eyebrows in top government circles and resulted in a reprimand to their author.

He is Stewart Goodings, assistant director of the peace corps-style company's organizing committee and a former president of the Canadian Union of Students.

Mr. Goodings, in an article for a recent edition of the Student Union for Peace Action newsletter, said the CYC is determined to "reflect the aspirations and concerns of the most progressive elements of the Canadian youth community."

He said students are wrong if they think the company will be "simply a device to divert radical energies into safe, responsible and conventional channels."

NOT OVERNIGHT MOVE
"One must try to encourage new power centres, especially among ordinary people, but one can hardly expect to replace the existing structure overnight."

Informed sources said that when the contents of the article became public knowledge, Mr. Goodings was called on the carpet by his immediate superior, CYC organizing director Duncan Edmonds. As a result of their talk, the sources added, Mr. Goodings is "not likely to write that kind of article again."

Mr. Edmonds confirmed Wednesday that he discussed the article with his subordinate, but declined to spell out details of the conversation.

"I can say, however, that Mr. Goodings' article does not represent my own views or those of the company," Mr. Edmonds said.

He added, however, that he felt Mr. Goodings "has a right" to express his views on the company's philosophy.

ON EMERGENCIES

City May Fix Traffic Tickets For Doctors

Police Chief J. F. Gregory will be asked to come up with a recommendation on "fixing" traffic tickets for doctors on emergency calls.

The city's legislative committee today decided to ask the police chief following a complaint from Dr. Derek Rogers who was ticketed for improper parking while he was attending an emergency heart patient.

"Some scheme should be worked out in which doctor's vehicles can be identified and the police could then use discretion in ticketing them," suggested Ald. Michael Griffin.

"When there is a complaint from a doctor why don't we just bring the ticket here (to the committee) and fix it for them," said Ald. Clyde Savage.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

The committee agreed this might set a dangerous precedent.

Ald. Griffin also had a few words to say about commissioners-ticketing cars for overtime parking.

"When there is only one car parked in an otherwise deserted block why in the name of hell do they put a ticket on that car for a violation?"

"The law was made to control traffic."

NONSENSE

"We should stop this nonsense. Issuing a ticket in a case like that is stupidity. The commissioners should use some discretion. It's just not thinking," declared Ald. Griffin.

"We don't pay the commissioners to think," said Ald. Lily Wilson. "We pay them to issue tickets."

The committee agreed the matter was one for the traffic committee to handle.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION

NA-2113 Half Size

Biki of Milan calls this design "Primavera," which is Italian for springtime, and a very appropriate description. The simple bodice is softly draped over the shoulder to give a very flattering bust line. The button detail down one side slices inches off one's figure. The narrow sash (belt) slips under the dress in back and through side openings to tie in a bow at centre front. The pattern comes with directions for making with or without sleeves. A perfect shape for summer in linen, crepe, cotton or any of the wonder mixtures of the market today. Spadea's exclusive ready-to-wear sizes produce a better fit. See chart for size best for you.

McColm-Sampson Vows Heard In St. Luke's Anglican Church

Carnations and roses in pink and white tones decorated St. Luke's Anglican Church and marked guest pews when Margaret Elizabeth Sampson became the bride of Thomas Frederick McColm, HMCS Jonquerre, Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff officiated.
Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sampson, 3450 Cedar Hill Road; Mrs. A. Jackson, Salt Spring Island, and R. F. McColm, Vancouver. Mr. Sampson gave his daughter in marriage.
Nylon roses accented the bustle back of the floor-length gown worn by the bride. It was fashioned of Alencon lace over taffeta and featured a boat scalloped neckline,illy point sleeves and back opening of tiny buttons. Sequin and pearl embroidery highlighted the bodice. The full bouffant veil was scalloped and misted from a diamond tiara.
Full-skirted nylon gowns, topped with lace bodices, were worn by maid of honor, Miss Marie Dempster; bridesmaid Miss Phyllis Sampson, the bride's sister; and flower girls, Sylvia McCahon and Geraldine Irwin, cousins of the bride.
The senior attendants carried white chrysanthemums and had bandeaux of the same flowers. The flower girls had blue chrysanthemums in their hair to match the flowers in the baskets they carried.
Best man was Robert Lukinuk and ushering guests were Stephen McColm and Douglas Sampson.
Edward Hartland—proposed the toast to the bride at a reception, held at the Club Soho. Flowers were in a pink and white theme. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Dewhurst of Palm Springs, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sampson of Oregon City, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lukinuk of Nainimo, Mrs. E. Sampson, Mrs. A. Jackson and Mrs. K. Galbraith, all of Ganges, Salt Spring Island.
Leaving on a honeymoon trip to Banff and Lake Louise, the bride donned an off-white suit with navy blue trim, complemented with navy blue accessories.
The newlyweds are now making their home at 3450 Cedar Hill Road.

FOR HAMILTON-KOLINSKI VOWS

Scarlet and White Gowns Worn By Two Bridesmaids

Afternoon-length dresses of white satin topped with red velvet jackets were worn by bridesmaids, the Misses Pat Cochrane and Gail Chipper, at the recent marriage of Miss Doreen Evelyn Winifred Kolinski and John Wayne Hamilton.
The daughter of William Kolinski, 1045 Costin Avenue, and Mrs. Joyce Langstaff, 919 Admirals Road, exchanged vows with the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Start of the Malahat.
Rev. Albert E. King conducted the service in Metropolitan United Church.
Baskets of pink carnations and white gladioli decorated the church. Wedding music was played by organist E. Boothroyd.
Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white peau de soie fashioned on empire lines featuring a bodice of lace and elbow length sleeves. The full skirt swept into a train from a bow at the waistline. A coronet of pearls held her tiered waist-length veil and she carried a Chantilly lace fan entwined with red and white roses.
A suit of French suede in camel tone was worn by the new Mrs. Hamilton for a wedding trip to Portland. Her wide brimmed hat was in dark brown and she wore a corsage of red roses.
The couple is now making their home at Colwood.

Driver Ignores Police Officialdom

MOSCOW PRESENTS ENIGMA

Miss Linda Seales and Miss Judy Richardson are in Europe on a two-year stay. Here, Miss Richardson gives another glimpse of life overseas.

By JUDY RICHARDSON

The Moscow policeman blew his whistle, waved his arms, shook his fist and stamped his foot—all to no avail. Magnificently oblivious, our mad Finnish bus driver wheeled his vehicle across the three lanes of traffic to the position he wanted, handling the big tour bus as if it were the smallest of English cars.

Richardson

By our second day in Moscow, the traffic police were prostrate with frustration. No amount of waving deterred our driver. He hated Moscow traffic and was determined each day to drive as quickly as possible the 20 miles from the campsite to his parking space near Red Square. Then he would relax in the foreign currency bar until time to take us all back at night. After four days of this, he was so ill the day we left Moscow that one of the passengers, a Finnish taxi driver, had to take over the driving for part of the day.

COMPLETE INDIFFERENCE

Although we worried at times about our safety, I think we enjoyed the bus driver's complete indifference to Russian authority in the shape of gesticulating policemen. Our encounters with Russian officialdom were not always so successful. Thinking that brochures, city maps and other tourist aids would be easily available in the Intourist offices of the cities we visited, we had left behind the heavy pile we collected in London before leaving.

When we discovered how much time we had to ourselves in Moscow, it became necessary to have a map and some information so that we could find our way around. The young woman at the Intourist office refused to give us one. "There are none left," she said. But she had not reckoned on our capitalistic spy machine. Two fellow tour mates had already succeeded in getting one that morning and informed us there was a large pile. We simply refused to move until she had to give us one to make us go away.

Victor, our Russian guide for Moscow, tried for an hour one afternoon to obtain brochures for several of us. Eventually he came back with a handful—all in Swedish.

What the Russians wanted us to do most of all was spend our foreign currency in their special shops for tourists. These shops are located in the main tourist hotels of the city and display the same merchandise—vodka, fur hats, amber jewelry, records, decorated wooden vases and so on. Prices are less than those in regular shops because goods must be paid for in foreign currency.

It was typical of the inefficiency and apathy we met everywhere that few shops had change in many currencies. I once paid for something with Norwegian bills. My change was worked out on an abacus (a frame with 10 parallel wires on each side 10 for counting) to be four shillings and twopenny in sterling. Then I was told they only had four shillings in English change, would I take a piece of chocolate in place of the twopenny? Appropriately, the chocolate was a circular piece wrapped in gilt paper printed to resemble money.

QUEUE FOR BREAD

There was as much rigmarole involved in spending Russian roubles. To buy bread, we had first to queue up, amidst jostling, elbowing, silently-pushing Russians, to determine the total cost of what we wanted. With this in mind and hopefully translated into Russian or written on a scrap of paper, we then joined the queue at the cash register to pay for our intended purchases. Finally, clutching the official slip bearing the amount paid, we joined the queue at the counter once more and pointed out what we wanted—which would be duly handed to us, unwrapped of course.

On the other hand, paying for transportation was extremely simple. On the trams we had only to drop four kopecks (about four cents) into a slot as one climbed on. Presumably you were expected to have the right

Quincey will entertain this evening at a party in their home at 1301 Fort Street following the wedding rehearsal for their daughter, Miss Frances Quincey and her fiancé, Mr. Michael Stuart in St. John's Anglican Church. Why your child's slippers should fit just as well as his shoes Properly fitting shoes are important for growing feet. But every day your child spends many hours in slippers. So their fit is important, too.

Foamtread slippers come in proper sizes so they start by fitting right. And they keep their fit indefinitely.

An unbreakable heel counter holds the foot snugly inside the slipper. The heels don't wear down. And the smooth leather outsoles give safe, sure footing without marking floors.

Foamtreads are completely washable too. So don't stop half-way: give your child every chance to develop strong, healthy feet by making sure his slippers fit just as well as his shoes.

P.S. When you buy their shoes for back to school, make them Packards.

DEAR ABBY...

Be on the Offense!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I know I'm not the only wife with this problem, so maybe if you printed this your answer could help countless others. I've been married for over 25 years. My husband and I are both over 50. We have children and grandchildren. The problem, of course, is my husband. He's good-looking, young-looking, in excellent health, and a hopeless woman chaser. (Not that he would be hard to catch.) He makes no secret of his escapades, expecting me to forgive and forget and not to take them seriously. He says none of these affairs is serious and he "loves" only me. I'm not afraid of "losing" him, but I'm humiliated. I see no end to his behavior. I must admit he is kind, considerate, a good provider (though I work, too) and I do love him in spite of everything. What to do? Divorce him and live a lonely, unhappy life? Or just wait for old age?

DEAR EVE: DON'T divorce him—but don't condone his behavior, either. Every time he steps out of line, raise the roof and let him know you are hurt, disgusted and humiliated. Punish him a little by being cool to him, but don't banish him to the couch or he'll have a good excuse to find a more comfortable bed. Many men stray because they really believe their wives don't care enough. Show him you care plenty. What do you have to lose?

DEAR ABBY: When a group of people work together on a project, such as a committee formed for the purpose of revising by-laws, in what order should the names of these people be listed in the report? There was no official chairman or head. Thank you.

DEAR BURNED: It doesn't matter. They could be listed alphabetically, or according to age, height or body weight. But the fairest method would be to put all their names into a hat and draw lots. This is sometimes known as "spit in the ocean."

girls would like to know the answer, too.

WENT STEADY.

I am 16 years old and was adopted when I was a week old and have known it for as long as I can remember. I wouldn't want it any other way. Being adopted is an accepted part of my life. Like having brown hair and hazel eyes. My mother used to introduce me as her little "adopted" girl even before I understood what the word "adopted" meant. It has always made me feel special, not different.

If I had grown up believing that my parents were my "real" parents, and they later told me (or I found out) that they were not my real parents after all, I would have been shocked and confused whether I was 10 or 20 at the time.

Being adopted doesn't make any difference in the way I feel about my parents. If anything, I think it makes me love them more because I know they gave up a part of their lives to raise me and they didn't even have to. Thank you for letting me say this, Abby. I've kept it inside of me a long time.

Got Cold in the Nose?
Don't Suffer, Read On!

By PENNY SAVER

End of the summer and cooler weather spells chest colds in our family. It never fails, every year at the advent of school days, so the sniffles and coughs start and, like most mothers facing the situation, I am taking precautions, and crossing my fingers that the old 'flu and cold bug ignores us.

Unlike the old days when children really needed a spoonful of sugar to help the medicine go down, vitamin supplements are now as tasty as candy.

In one pharmacy that I shopped at, I was astonished to find bottles of vitamin concentrate especially prepared for youngsters—at a reasonable price. Large (they contain 25 fluid ounces), the supplements include Vitamins A, B1, B6, C, D, niacinamide and they are priced at $2.88 a bottle.

If your child should come down with a cold, there are some marvellous drops laced with ingredients for anti-pain, anti-cold and anti-fever. These diminish a great deal of the misery of a cold and are harmless when used as prescribed.

A large jar of vitamins that look and taste like old-fashioned candy but are strong on supplements is selling for $2.99 for 150 tablets. Adults and children alike will enjoy taking these tasty vitamin tablets.

The tantalizing flavor of raspberry is featured in an excellent cough syrup that youngsters take to instantly. The preparation dills the hacking cough and brings relief in no time. A bottle sells at 89 cents.

Pains and fever of the 'flu or a chill can make life pretty miserable especially if it's impossible for you to go to bed and recover in comfort. These cold pills I have discovered are guaranteed to reduce the discomfort. They contain an antihistamine and a decongestant and their manufacturer claims they give all day and night relief. Take one in the morning and one at bedtime. Ten tablets costs $1.49.

While shopping in this drugstore, I noticed family size bottles of castile and lanolin oil shampoo at 98 cents. That's reasonable as the bottles contain 32 fluid ounces and contain ingredients suitable for every head of hair!

Where did Penny shop? Find out, by phoning me at 382-3131.

Banff Honeymoon Follows
Service In St. Michael's

A honeymoon in Banff was spent by newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lewis Goddard following their recent marriage in St. Michael's and All Angels' Church, Royal Oak.

The former Barbara Ellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Walker, 3366 Cook Street, and her groom were married by Canon J. Rogers in a ceremony at St. Michael's.

Mr. Goddard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. L. Goddard, 768 Halliburton Road. A sequin and seed pearl trimmed lace bodice highlighted the lovely white organza gown worn by the bride as she entered the church on the arm of her father. The bodice was enhanced by a sweetheart neckline and sleeves were lily point. Lace panels extended down the bouffant floor length skirt. A double coronet studded with seed pearls held her four-tier veil. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace, gift of the groom. Red roses, white carnations and lily of the valley were in her bouquet.

ATTENDANTS

Preceding the bride up the aisle were her attendants, the Misses Ruth and Judy MacKay. They wore full skirted gowns in yellow organza over taffeta. Large white rose headpieces centred in yellow were worn and they carried bouquets of rust toned carnations.

The groom's brother-in-law, Geoff Horner, was best man, and ushers were Gordon Goddard and James Walker.

George West-Johnson proposed the toast at the reception in Holyrood House.

For going away, the new Mrs. Goddard donned a pink suit, white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and lily of the valley.

The newlyweds are making their home at 4955 Highgate Road, Victoria.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Good Health Is More Than Absence of Illness and Pain

Too many folks think of good health in a negative sense, as merely an absence of illness or pain. Actually we should think of it in a much more positive way because fine health is positive and vibrant.

It is that extra amount of energy which makes movement a pleasure, adds zest to daily life, keeps laughter close to the surface, sharpens awareness, lifts facial contour, adds glow to personality, attracts friends and turns problems into challenges. Vibrant health as compared to just the absence of disease is the difference between being fully alive and only half alive.

In their interesting and helpful book "Add Life To Your Years" (The John Day Company, New York) Doctors Ernest P. Boas and Norman F. Boas emphasize this fact. They point out that "A person without disease may be soft and flabby, too stout or too thin, plagued with indigestion from improper eating habits so that he drags himself through the day's routine with the greatest effort and distress. It is quite possible for most of us to achieve a state of well-being if we give attention to some elementary precepts of hygiene and common sense."

How foolish we are if we don't pay attention, as a regular habit, to the tenets of good health. They are so simple that it is difficult to believe in their importance. The kind of food we eat can make such a difference, yet many people select their diet solely to please their taste buds, without any consideration for their heart, blood, muscles and bones.

Regular exercise is recognized today as one of the most effective weapons with which to delay aging and promote health. Most physicians recommend it all through life. The tendency is to become less active physically as one grows older. This is as it should be in that very strenuous sports should be dropped and less vigorous ones adopted as the years pass. Walking, swimming, golf, gardening and mild exercises can be taken down the years with one.

A vital diet, daily exercise suited to the individual, enough sleep and relaxation, will add that extra margin of energy which is so essential to vital living. Fortunately these are within the reach of everyone!

If you would like to have my leaflet "Vitamins In The Diet," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Chateau Strike Averted

OTTAWA (CP)—A wild-cat strike that would have tied up the capital's posh Chateau Laurier hotel was averted Wednesday night with an agreement that the CNR would accept the minimum $1.25-an-hour federal Labor Code wage.

A spokesman for the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) announced that the agreement had been signed by W. P. Wilson, vice-president in charge of labor relations for the CNR in Montreal, and W. J. Smith, the union's national president.

"This understanding removes the threat of a strike at the Chateau Laurier and other CNR hotels," the agreement said. It added that the $1.25 minimum will be incorporated into collective agreements covering all CNR hotels with employees represented by the brotherhood.

The agreement averting the Chateau strike, timed to coincide with Labor Day next Monday and the opening here of an international congress, came as a surprise.

The matter was discussed at a federal cabinet meeting earlier in the day. After the meeting, Prime Minister Pearson announced that he had organized a special cabinet committee to look into the issue.

IT'S SURPRISE:

Add there was no indication that the union, which insisted on complete acceptance of the $1.25 minimum, and the CNR, which had maintained that it shouldn't come under the federal labor law, were close to any agreement.

The CNR, which operates seven hotels across the country, said its wage rates were the highest in the hotel industry and enforcement of the federal minimum wage would tack another $250,000 a year to its wage bill. This could price its hotel chain out of the business, the publicly owned railway said.

It also noted that all other hotels, including those run by the privately-owned CPR, fall under provincial labor jurisdiction rather than the federal code that went into effect July 1.

Railway officials in Montreal had no comment on the announcement Wednesday night except to confirm that the agreement had been reached.

The union said 239 workers at the 550-room Chateau Laurier, and 1,000 across the country, now are being paid less than $1.25 an hour.

'FORGET IT'

Mayor Won't Prosecute U.S. Mayor

There's a $5 parking ticket somewhere in the mayor's official papers.

It's not Mayor Wilson's. In fact he can't even remember it being there.

The parking ticket was picked up by another mayor — Mayor Howard Wales, of Winthrop, Wash.

On holiday here during August, the out-of-town mayor was tagged by police for leaving his car in a No Parking zone.

His vehicle was towed away and cost $4.70 to retrieve.

Incensed by the treatment, the 65-year-old mayor left town.

He then sat down at his mayor's desk to write a scathing letter of attack to Victoria's mayor.

INCLUDED TICKET

In the letter, headed "Winthrop . . . The Town of Friendly People," he included his blue ticket.

The ticket is for illegal parking, standard fine, $5.

Said Mayor Wales by phone today: "I didn't really know what the ticket was for."

"But if it was for a fine I've no intention of paying it. Your mayor can pay it."

"It's his silly town that enforces this ridiculous tow-away system."

Said Mayor Wilson today: "I've not had time to deal with this. I've got far more important things on hand at the moment."

"The whole issue is best forgotten."

INSURANCE CARD LACK COSTS 'SWEEP' $10

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Alex Barisenkoff was fined $10 in magistrate's court here Wednesday for failing to apply for a social insurance number.

Barisenkoff, a chimney sweep, pleaded guilty to the charge.

He was the first person in the Vancouver area to be fined under the Unemployment Insurance Act regulation requiring employers and employees to apply for social security numbers.

$2 Million Offered Quebec Farmers

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — Catholic Farmers' Union in the Saguenay - Lake St. John district of Quebec who are asking $5,000,000 in government cash for crops lost in bad weather last year.

They met on the farm of the regional president of the union, Joseph Bouchard, their tractors and trucks ready for the road-blocking protest they have threatened in their conflict with the provincial and federal governments.

Quebec has offered them $1,000,000 in compensation, and Ottawa has agreed to match the provincial grant.

Speakers at the Wednesday night meeting told the farmers they will have to wait until Friday before blocking roads.

HIS TIPS NOT OFFICIAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deaf-mute Royal Burns, 59, has been remanded to Sept. 14 for sentence on a fraud charge. He admitted defrauding four city residents of $500 by telling them he was a race-horse trainer and offering them racing tips.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

The second best thing to happen to early-morning television, I mean real early by TV standards, is the CBS-TV news package with Mike Wallace.

Mike Wallace's news presentation used to be telecast at 9 a.m. on both Channels 7 and 12. Channel 7 retained this time period but the Bellingham outlet slotted Wallace at 7:35 a.m., allowing viewers to watch the latest film happenings and catch up on the world news before they head for their respective jobs.

The first best thing to happen to early-morning television will always be the NBC-TV Today show, naturally. Hugh Downs, Jack Lescault and Frank Blair make getting up in the morning a very easy thing as they offer as informative and entertaining a production as could be wished for.

It's unfortunate that both of these programs must clash. However the choice for the viewer is there for the taking.

The Negro in television is an ever-present problem. The NAACP (National Association for Advancement of Colored People) has been assured that integration will continue to take place in television.

The John Forsythe Show will cast the role of a Negro teacher, a recurring role on the show, and will continue to feature Negro and Oriental children throughout the segments.

Ironically, the "I Spy" series is having trouble finding a Negro actor for a major role in an episode still to be filmed.

The series already has Negro comedian Bill Cosby in a co-star role with Robert Culp. The trouble stems from the fact that Culp, who will direct this episode, is looking for a Negro 50 years or older, with a British accent, to play a last-remaining descendant of the Zulu nation.

Forrest Tucker, who will play the Bilko-McHale type role in ABC-TV's "F Troop" comedy-situation series, says Jim Arness had previously asked him to take 32 starring roles on CBS-TV's Gunsmoke. Tucker was for the idea but "F Troop" firmed first.

Glynis, the comedy series with British comedienne Glynis Johns, which bombed in its initial run on CBS-TV, has done great in the ratings as a rerun this summer.

Ensign O'Toole, with Dean Jones, was another series which was slaughtered in first exposure to the masses. Audiences ate up the reruns.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

By ALAN KING

NEW YORK—Everyone I meet lately has been asking me what drives a "safoom comic" to do a Broadway show when he can earn a good living playing twice a year at the Sands in Las Vegas, appearing a half dozen times on the Ed Sullivan Show, and working the banquet circuit with regularity? They ask, "Why do you commit yourself to a one-year contract at less money and undertake the burden of the monkish discipline of the theatre, the four weeks rehearsal, five weeks on the road and the eight shows a week for the run of the play, not to mention laying your reputation, artistry and self-esteem on the New York drama critics' chopping block?"

The answer is obvious—I'm sick!

The play I'm to be in is called "The Impossible Years," and it's one of the funniest scripts I've ever read. I play a psychiatrist who is having trouble with his kids, a role I can easily identify with. To prepare for the part I'm trying to convince my wife to allow me to experiment with LSD—on her. I write down what everyone says on lined paper, and mutter "hmmmm," sagely. I've also bought three pairs of bifocals and sent all my clothes out to be rumpled and I don't know how the word spread, but I've already received three letters from the AMA dunning me for contributions to the fight against Medicare.

"The Impossible Years" was written by Bob Fisher and Arthur Marx. Arthur ("Owl and the Pussycat") Storch is directing it and the producers really are Black and Hymann, better known on the "Late Show" as Sidney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre.

I'm grateful to all of them for giving me a chance to put to the test a conviction I've had for years of sitting in theatre audiences and watching the great players of our time weave their incandescent spells.

Many's the time I've said to myself, with traditional actor's humility, "I could have played Professor Higgins as well as Rex Harrison." Of course in my version of "My Fair Lady" Eliza Doolittle would teach ME how to speak.

To prove the sincerity of my new dedication to the theatre I now take a solemn oath to adhere to the Broadway Star's Code of Required Behavior, to wit:

1. I promise to attend every dull party and sit on the floor.
2. I promise to hold a symposium with my fellow actors

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Nancy Mack, age 11, of Milwaukee, Wis., for her question:

Where are lemurs found?

These charming monkey-like creatures are more often heard than seen, even on the world's fourth largest island, which is one of their native haunts. The lemurs in zoos also are a rare sight. But some keepers now use a subtle trick to show the sleepy daydreamers during visiting hours.

The assorted lemurs are tree dwellers that enjoy a warm year-round climate which is softly wafted with balmy breezes from the ocean. These conditions prevail on Madagascar and other neighboring islands in the Indian Ocean. And on these wind and wave-washed islands there are large numbers of the various lemur cousins. We must, however, search for them at night, and even then we may not see them.

But we would hear them—oh my, how we would hear them. Their voices fill the night with weird wails and eerie shrieks, with sad moans and sorrowful groans. But they stay hidden high in the jungle foliage, leaping like agile acrobats from shadow to shadow. The Malagasy people of Madagascar named them lemurs, meaning ghosts.

The pretty monkey-like creatures have soft, silken coats of fur, and their big, bright eyes are vague and dreamy. They are daydreamers who sleep through the sunlit hours. At night, groups of them go swooping through the shadowy jungle, making Halloween noises as they go. They are foraging for fruit, nuts, insects and perhaps bird eggs.

In summer, their climate often turns hot and dry. During these spells there may be a shortage of lemur food. Some of them go into summer hibernation until things improve. Each finds himself a small den, perhaps in a hollow tree, and lines it with leaves. Then he curls into a kittenish ball, with his fluffy tail wrapped cosily around his neck, and sleeps until the rains come to renew and refresh the forest.

Sees Well In the Darkness

The biggest lemur is the two-foot tall indri. This shaggy, black and white fellow has no tail and often walks on the ground. His many cousins are long-tailed tree dwellers who keep out of sight in the high branches of the jungle. A baby lemur is an only child. He goes wherever mama goes, clinging with tiny hands to her silken fur. Next year he will be grown, and mama will have another baby lemur.

The strange eyes of the lemurs see well in the darkness, but sunlight is too bright for them. In zoos they tend to hide and sleep during the daytime visiting hours. But scientists found that they mistake red light for no light or darkness. When their cages are lit with a soft ruby glow, the little captives often wake up and perform a frolicsome daytime show for the visiting humans.

TEEN-AGE CANADA

They Won't Tell Their Best Friend

By JACK HUTTON

A significant percentage of Canadian students hold a secret conviction so awful they won't tell their best friends. . . they believe summer vacations are too long.

Horrors, you say. That can't be true.

The yawning school door is less than a week away. You want at least two more weeks of freedom. Anyone wanting to end this idyllic bliss must be crazy.

Well, they say figures don't lie. And secret agents for this column have just completed a survey of 150 students between the ages of 14 and 19 in three cities—Calgary, Halifax and Edmonton.

During the last two weeks three friends made a point of casually inviting answers to the question: "What do you think of your summer holidays?" What happened? The answers exploded the Tom Sawyer myth of youth lying in the hot summer grass, chewing blades of grass and happily daydreaming about fishing for bass in the creek.

More than two-thirds (110) said they were bored. Yes, bored. When did they become bored? The answers varied from one bookworm who said one day after school finished to the majority who confessed they were searching for ways to fill their time by the end of July.

Here were some typical reasons, as reported to this column.

A 14-year-old Halifax girl: "Maybe it would be better if my family went to a cottage, but the folks are too busy this year. It can be pretty lonely when most of your friends leave for camp and cottages that sound exciting."

A 16-year-old Calgary girl who DID go to a cottage: "It was great for a week, but I'm the oldest of five kids. And what I don't like is that I'm chief babysitter for the youngest. This is no way to spend a holiday. I look after them at home too."

A 15-year-old fellow in Edmonton who stayed in the city: "After the first two weeks my mother started asking, 'Well, what are you going to do today? Lie around the backyard?' That meant I just loitered around the corner coffee shop with some other guys who were getting the same treatment. None of us enjoyed it."

So 150 answers prove nothing, you say. And we asked questions in only three cities that prove nothing about the rest of the country? What about the 40 who weren't bored?

The funny thing about those who said they weren't bored was that they were busier than they would be in school. They were trying summer courses, learning how to paint, plowing through reading programs to give themselves a head start for the fall, involved in jobs that paid little but challenged them. And there was something else that the 40 shared: they were all looking forward to school opening.

The rest had mixed feelings ("I guess it's better than what I'm doing" was typical) although every one of them had looked forward to getting out of the classroom.

Something went sour. Was it because they weren't self-starters? Would they have been happy even if they'd done whatever they said they wanted to? I wonder? Now that summer is in its dying days, I'd like to hear what you think. Should summer holidays be longer or would you like to see them shortened? Or do you think there should be more organized activities in the same time? I'll let the rest of you know the results of our mail poll.

Summer Work

And, just to back us up in our survey, a McGill University expert claims the day is almost over when a university student can expect to finance his education through summer work.

Colin Doherty, assistant to the director of McGill's University Placement Bureau, told a Montreal reporter he believes the only way a student can finance his own education is to take a year off work.

"What we're up against," he said, "is that in the last eight years the number of university students has doubled, and it will probably double again in the next six years."

"With this greater number of students seeking the jobs that are available, some are bound to get left out."

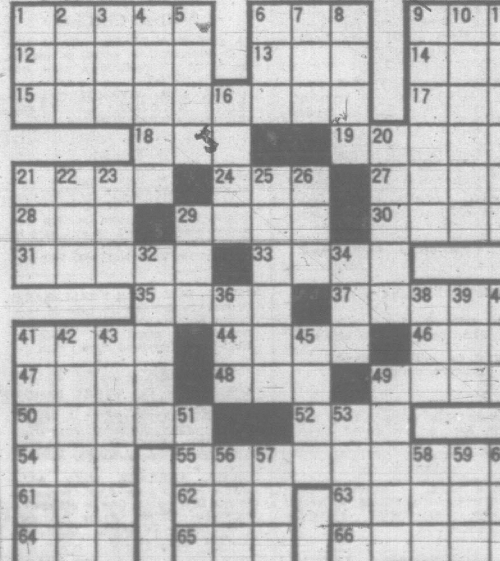

Prophetic words. Remember them next spring.

Sensational Press 'Glorifying Crime'

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Paul Gilbert, assistant director of the Montreal police department, Wednesday attacked the "sensational" manner in which the press and other news media report on crime.

The police officer was one of four persons who spoke on the topic of Publicity in Criminal Affairs to delegates at the International Criminological Congress here.

Mr. Gilbert said that "as crime is a social reality, it is the (the newspapers) job to point out that the evil exists," but he took issue with the choice of subject matter and the presentation.

There are people who are unbalanced and predisposed to crime who can be triggered into committing a criminal act by scenes which are too suggestive or "after having read a too-detailed story on criminality."

"All too often information media forget to take this into account."

And in addition to their job of informing, news media had another reason for existing: that of operating at a profit.

Mr. Gilbert said his opinion, and that of other veteran officers, is that "certain (crime) stories, because of the way they are presented, exert a strong influence on the individual's behavior and furnish techniques which will be used by those interested in crime."

Giving too many details often tipped off the criminal that certain establishments were not well protected by alarms or inadequately guarded.

"Also, some journalists, faced with stiff competition and hoping to impress their bosses, present the news in a manner which glorifies certain categories of crime and thus raise the prestige and even the influence of the criminal in his environment," Mr. Gilbert said.

In addition to giving a too-detailed story, newspapers sometimes treated matters such as jail breaks in such a manner that the criminal was made into a popular hero.

"Approximately two years ago, there was a great deal of publicity about 'goof balls'. Our police then noticed a remarkable rise in the number of juveniles using the barbiturates. Those caught said they were using them 'to find out what it was like.'"

"Without saying that the press is a factor in criminality, it is permissible to say that in certain circumstances crime waves are a result of exaggerated publicity."

"When, for example, we see flamboyant headlines speaking of an epidemic of drug store robberies, vandalism, sexual offences, etc. . . . Our policemen get ready to have a repetition of the crime wave."

Stories should give the reader a true image of crime. The newspaper's job would also entail constructive criticism of police forces.

He said he wanted to make clear that "the danger of publicity resides in the manner of presentation and not in the subject matter."

PORT BAN PROPOSED BY U.S. SENATOR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Birch Bayh (Dem.-Ind.) has introduced a bill that would close U.S. ports to any foreign vessel that carried a cargo to North Viet Nam.

Birch said Britain accounts for 60 per cent of non-Communist traffic to Viet Nam, with cargoes delivered also by Japanese, Greek, Norwegian, Dutch and Lebanese ships.

Curfew Imposed in Aden

ADEN (Reuters)—British security officials today imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew in the Crater area of Aden where two gunmen Wednesday night assassinated Sir Arthur Charles, British Speaker of the Aden Legislative Council.

Authorities said members of the Arab federal guards would assist British troops and Aden police in maintaining the curfew.

Aden's chief minister Abdul Aqwee Mackawee said the curfew and the continuation of the existing state of emergency would not solve any problems.

"In fact from our experience so far such measures only helped to increase tension."

A political solution was needed for dealing with the area's problems. "It is imperative for Britain, in order to help in any settlement of our problems, to improve relations with the Yemen republic," he said.

Britain does not recognize the republican Yemen regime.

'POLICE STATE REDUCES CRIME'

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto defence lawyers argued against giving more power to the police Wednesday, while a Crown counsel and the chairman of the Ontario Police Commission said they were necessary to enable police to carry out their duties and reduce crime.

In a panel discussion before the Canadian Bar Association's annual convention, defence lawyers Arthur M. Maloney and Joseph B. Pomeroy said increasing the power of the police would diminish the cherished liberty of Canadians.

Their opponents on the panel said police should be given more power to enable them to ask citizens for mandatory identity cards and fingerprints, tap telephones, hold suspects incommunicado, administer compulsory breath analysis tests and allow a wife to testify against her husband.

MALONEY . . . preserve society

R. Percy Milligan, a former Crown counsel who is chairman of the police commission, said crime is increasing in Canada at a greater rate than the population and "why send our police into a war against crime with their hands tied behind their backs?"

Mr. Maloney said that if police-state methods were used not many crimes would go unsolved. But "we would prefer that a murderer go free and a robber go uncaught in order to preserve our free society."

Bruce Affleck, Crown counsel for the Oshawa, Ont., area told the panel increased efficiency of crime detection is a much greater influence in reducing crime than is an increase in the severity of sentences.

WIDE POWERS

Hon. J. T. Thorson, retired president of the Exchequer Court of Canada, told the association the government must have wide powers to catch fraudulent taxpayers and the fact that a few innocent persons may have inadvertently become involved in the process should not deter such activity.

Clifford Lewis of Toronto said the only way for the government to nail tax evaders is a study of personal records. This imposed the question of how far civil rights should be abrogated to provide the government with an enforcement weapon.

The Nova Scotia sub-section, in a companion report, suggested the government give consideration to filing joint tax returns by husbands and wives as is permitted in the United States.

In another panel discussion Wednesday, veteran mining lawyer James P. Manley said moves to set up tighter controls to protect persons buying speculative mining stocks may create a "more orderly hysteria" but won't prevent future gambling sprees on the stock exchanges.

He said it is generally true legislation passed to protect persons gambling on speculative stocks means little and that there is no doubt another speculation boom such as followed last year's major strike near Timmins, Ont., could develop any day.

Lewis F. Powell Jr., immediate past president of the American Bar Association, told the association's annual dinner Wednesday night that lawyers, police and news media must exercise restraint to ensure that accused persons get a fair trial.

Half-Way Houses Solution?

MONTREAL (CP) — A. J. MacLeod said Wednesday night measures are being taken to smooth the road for convicts returning to normal life from prison.

Mr. MacLeod, federal commissioner of penitentiary services, said: "We've never had enough staff, equipment or institutions small enough to concentrate more on the individual."

However, the commissioner told the International Criminological Congress an attempt is being made to solve the latter point by establishing five tiny half-way houses in Canada.

The houses are an experiment aimed at making the transition from prison to freedom easier on the convicts.

Construction of the houses, places from which the convicted offender goes to work in normal society but to which he must return at night, is to begin during the next fiscal year which begins April 1, 1966.

Prisoners serving sentences of from two to five years will be treated in the houses.

Severe Sentences A Failure, Says Red

MONTREAL (UPI) — The "rough handling" of criminals in Iron Curtain countries during the Stalinist era had the effect of increasing the rate of crimes instead of reducing it, a prominent Hungarian criminologist said Wednesday.

Without changing the penal code, courts and tribunals have imposed mild sentences during the past five years in Hungary and the result was a drastic cut in crimes, said Dr. Miklos Vermes, a professor at the Budapest University and the head of the Hungarian delegation at the Fifth International Criminological Congress being held here.

"Severe sentences were a failure," he said, "we had to use mild ones."

Vermes says there is no difference in the prevention of crime in capitalist or socialist countries. "My own research in France and other western European countries brought me to the conclusion that there is a similarity between the methods we use in Hungary and the west European countries in preventing and detecting crime."

"The only difference is the more severe punishment we impose when dealing with crimes against state property. This must be understood because state property remains the base of our political and economic foundations."

"The death sentence," says Vermes, "remains in the code, but seldom is put in force. Exceptions are made for the state treason and very serious espionage cases."

Students Demanding Birth Control Facts

LENNONVILLE, Que. (CP)—Students who want birth control information should be entitled to get it, the Canadian Union of Students decided Wednesday.

Delegates to the union's annual meeting adopted a resolution aimed at making legal the sale of contraceptives and the dissemination of birth control information.

The resolution, calling for the necessary change in the Criminal Code, was the only one adopted in plenary session, which in effect makes it part of the official policy of the group which represents students at some 45 universities, colleges and technical institutes across Canada.

Adopted at the committee level, and slated for later presentation to the full assembly, were resolutions calling for the abolition of tuition fees and for the recognition, on terms of equality, of the Quebec student union, l'Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec.

The Canadian affairs committee called for the abolition of university level tuition fees along with such expenses as room and board, books and travelling expenses to and from universities.

Opposition to the motion came from the universities of Saskatchewan and Manitoba whose delegates felt students might be accepting a principle that the Canadian nation had rejected many times, by taking government subsidies to cover all tuition fees and other expenses.

'CAUSES UNREST'

George Hees, president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, told the students lack of communication between French- and English-speaking Canada is responsible more than anything else for current unrest in Quebec.

Mr. Hees said most of Canada's federal leaders, unable to speak French, "have had to rely on lieutenants for their advice on Quebec problems and this advice was not always soundly based."

"The rare appearances of our federal leaders in Quebec, except at election time, and

HEES communication lack their inability to communicate directly with the people, has left the definite impression that they were not interested in Quebec's problems."

Mr. Hees was convinced, however, that Quebec would not separate from the rest of Canada.

He said Quebecers realized that "economically and every other way Quebec needs the rest of Canada and the rest of Canada needs Quebec."

The key to a workable partnership between English and French Canada was mutual understanding based on increased dialogue between the two founding races.

NKRUMAH
... direct command

Ghana President Ousts Generals, Takes Over Army

ACCRA (AP) — President Kwame Nkrumah has taken direct command of Ghana's army following widespread rumors that some generals wanted to depose him.

Sources said two generals, ousted from their posts and retired in a surprise move last month, suggested Ghana would be better off without Nkrumah.

There was no indignation, however, the generals actually plotted against the Ghanaian president.

Nkrumah took over command of the army Tuesday in a ceremony at Accra's Burmah camp.

His newly-appointed chief of defence, Maj.-Gen. N. A. Aferi, and other senior officers then took an oath of allegiance to Nkrumah.

Aferi and Maj.-Gen. Charles M. Barwah were named chief and deputy chief of the defence staff early last month, replacing Maj.-Gen. S. J. A. Otu and Iji A. Ankrab respectively.

Reliable reports indicated the two relieved generals expressed resentment of Nkrumah's regime. Neither of the newly-retired officers, both 49, has been held or charged.

Ghana's government-controlled press and radio gave no reasons for the unexpected staff changes.

By taking direct command of the 10,000-man army Nkrumah left Defence Minister Kofi Baako with only the jobs of civil defence, the veterans organization and administrative work.

Nkrumah previously had taken direct command of his personal security battalion which acts as his household guard.

Ghana's special security police are Russian-aided. All other police have been disbanded since a young constable attempted to shoot Nkrumah in February, 1964.

Pakistani Troops Drive To Cut Major Road Link

Tanks, Planes Support Offensive Into Kashmir

KARACHI (UPI) — Troops of the regular Pakistani army have advanced 28 miles east into Indian-held Kashmir in their first open assault against Indian army troops, it was reported unofficially here tonight.

The first thrust of the attack Wednesday carried the Pakistanis up to eight miles inside Indian territory and the Pakistanis moved another 20 miles today against what a spokesman called only "negligible" resistance.

The reports said the troops accompanied by Azad (Free) Kashmiri forces had reached the town of Akhaur, barely 15 miles from Jammu City, a major communication link on road connecting India and Pakistan.

The troops were reported using tanks and artillery and moving under cover of warplanes.

(The Indian defence ministry announced in New Delhi that air battles broke out today over the disputed area and that the Indian planes drove off Pakistani F86 Sabrejets believed equipped with American Sidewinder missiles.

'Very Heavy' Casualties Report
(The Indian spokesman made no mention of losses on either side. Earlier, it was admitted that four Indian fighter-bombers were shot down by Pakistani planes Wednesday.)

A Pakistani defence ministry spokesman in Rawalpindi said the Indian forces were suffering "very heavy" casualties in the fighting raging in the southwest corner of the disputed Kashmir territory.

He said the eastward advance by the combined Pakistani-Azad Kashmiri troops "remained unchecked."

Observers here said it appeared the Pakistani forces were attempting to cut the only major road linking Indian-held Kashmir with India.

The spokesman said that the initial thrust across the ceasefire line Wednesday resulted in the capture of 150 Indian army prisoners and 15 tanks in "perfect running condition."

(In New Delhi Prime Minister Shastri accused Pakistan of destroying the Kashmiri ceasefire agreement and the line itself.

American sources confirmed that India had lodged a "vigorous protest" against the use by Pakistan of Patton tanks supplied by the United States. The tanks were delivered to Pakistan on condition they would be used only against possible Communist aggression.

(The late U.S. Secretary of State) John Foster Dulles and others gave us all kinds of assurances this would not happen," one Indian official commented about the tanks. "But here they are."

Indian sources claimed they had destroyed 13 of the tanks.

WHERE PAKISTANI troops swept into India-held Kashmir is indicated in map. The forces captured two Indian posts today in the Bhimbar sector, said a spokesman in Karachi. The spokesman acknowledged that Pakistani defenders had lost Haji Pir Pass, about 10 miles inside Pakistan-held Kashmir, to the Indians. The spokesman said that early in August the Indians had crossed the cease-fire line and occupied two outposts in the Tithwal sector.

PHONE TIP LEADS TO STOLEN BONDS

'Go to Field, Find $2 Million'

MONTREAL (CP) — Possibly more than $2,000,000 worth of bonds stolen from a bank last spring have been recovered by police as the result of a telephone tip.

The bonds were found Wednesday night tightly packed in a suitcase and several cardboard boxes, in a field north of Metropolitan Boulevard off Christophe Colomb St.

The robbery was staged the weekend of April 10-11 at a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in the Van Horne shopping centre. There were estimates at the time that the total loot may be as high as $3,000,000.

A team of eight detectives worked today testing the recovered bonds for fingerprints and tabulating them by serial numbers and denominations.

They said the total value of the recovered bonds may be well more than $2,000,000. The bonds, most of them Canada Savings Bonds, range in denomination from $50 to $10,000.

Detective - Insp. Roland Perron of the Montreal police department was in his office Thursday when a telephone call came through about 1:30 p.m.

TOLD TO EXPECT CALL
The caller said: Be in your office between three and five o'clock this afternoon. I'll have something to tell you that's plenty big."

Insp. Perron waited until 5:30 p.m. There was no call. He left for an appointment at city hall, then went home to dinner.

Concerned that the promised call may have come in his absence, he returned to his office. But the call went to his home. The caller was told the inspector was at headquarters.

General Election May Be Outcome

LONDON (Reuters) — Sir Harry Hylton-Foster, speaker of the House of Commons, collapsed and died today, plunging Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government into a political and constitutional crisis.

Hylton-Foster, 60, who contested the last general election as a non-party candidate, was dead on arrival at a hospital after collapsing on a London street.

A policeman tried in vain to revive him with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when he collapsed, just a few streets from the spot where U.S. United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson died July 14.

The prime minister immediately called in house leader Herbert Bowden to discuss the implications for the government, which holds office with a slim over-all margin of two in the 630-seat lower house.

The margin was cut from three recently by the death of a Labor MP, and this constituency is expected to elect another Labor candidate in a by-election.

MAY SPEED ELECTION
There was immediate speculation that the crisis might be settled only by calling a general election earlier than expected.

If the Labor party named a new speaker from within its own parliamentary ranks; and lost the by-election, its majority could be reduced to one.

With the death of Hylton-Foster, much will now depend on the stand taken by new Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath.

The government could lose its overall margin in the house if: ● The government lost its pending by-election at Erith and Crayford, near London, cutting its over-all margin to one. This would be a shock result, since Labor's majority over Conservatives was nearly 9,000 votes in the general election.

● Heath refused to allow a Conservative to become Speaker, forcing the government to provide the new Speaker from its own ranks.

● The safe Conservative seat of the cities of London and Westminster—until now held by Hylton-Foster—was again contested on a party basis and won by the opposition.

The entire situation became even more complex in its purely constitutional aspect, since there is no modern precedent for the death of a Speaker during a parliamentary recess.

This could hold up technical arrangements for the Erith by-election, originally planned for early October—well before Parliament returns from its summer recess Oct. 26.

The authority for a special election has to be given by the Speaker, and this now will be delayed until a new Speaker is chosen.

Both sides agreed last October that Hylton-Foster—former Conservative minister who became speaker during the previous conservative administration—should keep his post.

'Kidnapped' Cubans Win Freedom

HAVANA (Reuters) — Premier Fidel Castro has agreed to British requests to release 19 Cuban refugees seized from Anguilla Cay in the Bahamas two years ago, authoritative sources said today.

The first two were due to leave today for Nassau and the rest were to follow in pairs at two-week intervals.

The refugees, including women and children who left Cuba secretly, were spotted by Cuban planes and seized by a Cuban launch when they were already on the British island in August, 1963.

The incident, which involved a breach of international law, aroused considerable concern at the time, and the British government was understood to have been pressing the Cuban government ever since to return the 19 to Anguilla Cay.

Brains Drain Into Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has been on the receiving end of the post-war "brain drain," according to a research study prepared for the Economic Council of Canada.

The study made public today showed that in the years 1950 to 1963 Canada had an annual average inflow of professionally trained immigrants numbering 7,790, while there was an annual outflow of emigrants in the same categories numbering 5,476.

New Race Riots Feared

By The Associated Press

A flying squad of Mississippi national guardsmen with fixed bayonets moved into the downtown area of Natchez this afternoon as city officials rejected desegregation demands made by Negroes.

City officials announced rejection of the Negroes' 12 demands following a two-hour meeting with representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Several hundred Negroes, singing—songs and clapping, gathered at a Negro leader's home to await word on the negotiations.

Governor Paul Johnson ordered 650 Mississippi guardsmen into Natchez earlier today, saying a riot was imminent.

In rejecting the Negroes' demands, city officials said many of them were beyond the city's jurisdiction to solve.

The Negro demands were made following the booby-trap bombing last Friday of a Negro leader's car.

The bombing victim, George Metcalfe of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, (NAACP) was in fair condition with leg, arm and face injuries from the blast Friday in a parking lot.

CONFERENCE DELAYED
The biracial conference was delayed Wednesday night when officials decided it was better not to meet at night.

Negro demands include denunciation of the Klan by the city of Natchez, desegregation of public facilities, equal job opportunities and police escorts for Negro funerals.

NAACP field secretary Charles Evers said Wednesday "tension is growing." Mississippi Klan Dragon E. L. McDaniel said, "we have been armed for some time and we are going to stay armed."

Natchez is not going to be another Los Angeles.

In another trouble spot, Plymouth, N.C., civil rights leaders were granted a permit for a march to the courthouse and new biracial council held its first meeting.

Schweitzer Gravely Ill

LAMBARENE, Gabon (Reuters) — Dr. Albert Schweitzer spent a peaceful night but was reported confined to his hospital room today and seeing no one.

Fellow physicians at the jungle hospital, deep in the heart of equatorial Africa, said Wednesday the 90-year-old missionary doctor was seriously ill, suffering from fatigue.

Reports from the hospital today said the fatigue was caused partly by the number of visitors he has recently received.

ANYONE GOT $2 MILLION HANDY?

Country-Size Ranch for Sale

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — This may be the perfect gift for that fellow who has everything: A Nevada ranch the size of Luxembourg.

The ranch of slain millionaire William A. Bartholomae, covering 900 square miles, is up for sale.

Included are cattle and coyotes, green irrigated valleys and desert mountains, 54 horses and a host of buildings. If you like space, it's roughly 66 miles from front door to back gate.

There are 20 buildings at the Fish Creek Ranch including a cottage, office, kitchen-recreation hall, bunk house, saddle and tack room and barns. Sealed bids will be opened Sept. 7.

But the property has been appraised at $1,876,313.90, including land and leases, grazing rights, the horses, 2,220 head of Hereford cattle and $9,535 worth of vehicles.

The sale notice stipulates that the entire ranch is to be sold as a package.

Bartholomae, 70, was fatally stabbed in his Newport Beach, Calif., home Jan. 5, 1964, by Minola Gillardo, 32, a dancer from Spain. Her sister was married to Bartholomae's brother.

She was acquitted July 7, 1964, after testifying that the language barrier led to a struggle and his death.

City May Fix Traffic Tickets For Doctors

Police Chief J. F. Gregory will be asked to come up with a recommendation on "fixing" traffic tickets for doctors on emergency calls.

The city's legislative committee today decided to ask the police chief following a complaint from Dr. Derek Rogers who was ticketed for improper parking while he was attending an emergency heart patient.

"Some scheme should be worked out in which doctor's vehicles can be identified, and the police could then use discretion in ticketing them," suggested Ald. Michael Griffin.

"When there is a complaint from a doctor why don't we just bring the ticket here (to the committee) and fix it for them," said Ald. Clyde Savage.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

The committee agreed this might set a dangerous precedent.

Ald. Griffin also had a few words to say about commissioners ticketing cars for overtime parking.

"When there is only one car parked in an otherwise deserted block why in the name of hell do they put a ticket on that car for a violation?"

"The law was made to control traffic."

NONSENSE

"We should stop this nonsense. Issuing a ticket in a case like that is stupidity. The commissioners should use some discretion. It's just not thinking," declared Ald. Griffin.

"We don't pay the commissioners to think," said Ald. Lily Wilson. "We pay them to issue tickets."

The committee agreed the matter was one for the traffic committee to handle.

RAY LEJEUNE
Entomological Society

Research Lab Director Named New President

Victoria entomologist Ray Lejeune, director of Victoria Forest Research Laboratory, today took office in Fredericton, N.B., as president of the Entomological Society of Canada.

He is now meeting with 200 delegates from Canada and the United States at the University of New Brunswick.

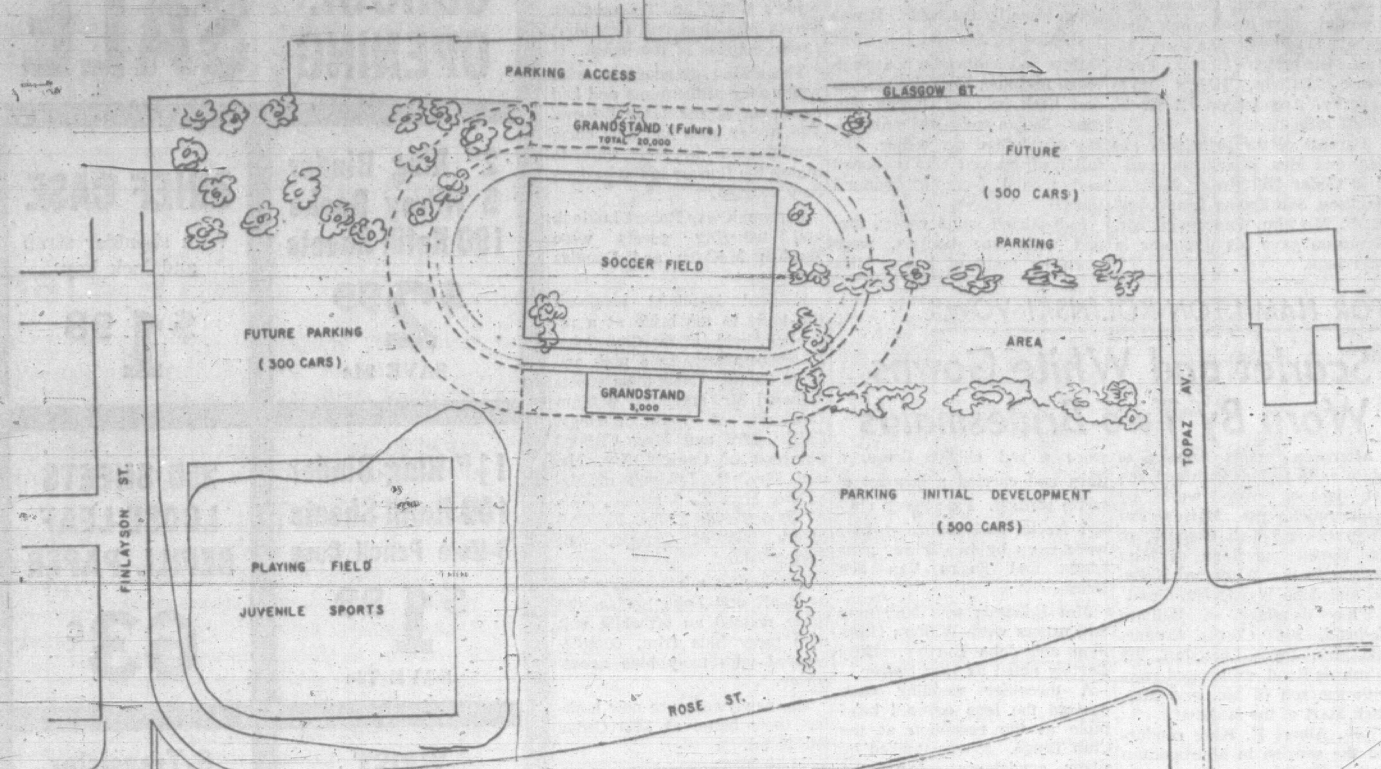

C. L. Neilson of Victoria, who also is attending, is a new director of the society.

The three-day meeting is being held jointly with the Acadian Entomological Society.

Main theme of the discussions is Introduced Insects. Of the 33 scientific papers being presented two are by B.C. entomologists, P. R. Wilkinson of Kamloops and J. Rajne of Vancouver.

Discussions cover present preventive measures, biological controls, the arrival and dispersal of foreign insects and how they differ from native insect species.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION

$600,000 BONUS FOR CITY SITE

Mayor Details City Planning for Stadium

Complete details of Victoria City's plan for the joint centennial sports stadium project for the south island area were made public today by Mayor R. B. Wilson.

A sketch plan, printed above, shows provision for one major playing field with a running track around it.

In the initial plan would be a concrete grandstand capable of seating 3,000. In future years additional stands could be erected to take care of 20,000 in all.

The 25-acre site in the Topaz area provides additional fields for junior sports, along with parking areas.

The city owns the bulk of the land now, but to complete the area, would have to purchase about eight acres of land, now privately owned, for about $200,000.

The grand total budget for the scheme is $1,137,650.

If agreement is reached with other municipalities the joint government-municipal project fund, totaling $450,000, would form the nucleus of the project capital.

Then the city proposes to add $600,000 of the money left to it by philanthropist Thomas S. McPherson. The balance of some $87,000 would be raised in other ways.

However, the city's contribution from the McPherson bequest cannot be made unless the project is constructed within the city limits, by the terms of the will.

This, so far as Victoria is concerned, rules out any site but Topaz Park.

The detailed budget calls for expenditure of $714,750 on the main centre field and stadium area.

Major part of this cost will be $600,000 for the grandstand itself. This will be on the south side. Additions can later be made on either side of it, and also on the north side of the field.

Other items are:

Grading the field, $12,000.
Sawdust and grass for surface, $15,300.
Drainage, $12,450.
Paving of running track, $36,000.
Lighting, $24,000.
Sprinkler system, $2,500.
Fencing, $8,000.
Gravel, $4,300.

On the south field there is provision for $120,000 expenditure of which $70,000 is for a 500-car parking lot and $50,000 for such extras as drives, landscaping and sports facilities.

The budget is rounded out with $202,900 allocated for purchase of 8.116 acres at $25,000 an acre, and a contingency fund of $100,000.

As explained by Mayor Wilson the area is large enough for later development of additional parking space as well as sports use.

Next step toward agreement on the centennial project will be discussion between the city and Saanich as to whether the Topaz or Saanich's Tillicum area project is most acceptable. Up to now a detailed budget for the Saanich scheme has not been made public.

UP TO SAANICH

Row Due In Saanich On Court

Reeve Asks for Meeting To Clarify Jurisdiction

Saanich is digging for a fight over the attorney-general's department ruling that the centralized Greater Victoria magistrate's court will be returned to its downtown Victoria location.

Reeve Hugh Curtis this morning said he has asked for a meeting "within a few days" with deputy minister Dr. Gilbert Kennedy.

"We are asking for an indication from the department as to the reasons and authority for the move," he said.

"Every indication we have is that where a municipality has its own courtroom and lock-up, such as we do, it is more efficient for it to operate its own court."

Mr. Curtis said Saanich not only will buck the order to take its police cases to the new location but it also has "serious reservations" about the department's suggestion that the centralized family court might move into its police building.

NOT GOOD PRACTICE

"Social workers advise us that it is not good practice to hold juvenile cases or family cases in areas where police uniforms abound," he said. "Our facility is known as a police building no matter how pretty it looks."

The Reeve, however, agreed with a third departmental suggestion that the Greater Victoria municipalities should set up a joint prosecutors' office. But he admitted this likely would not get Saanich's official blessing unless the centralized court was held in its building.

Meanwhile, an official in the attorney-general's department, recalled that the centralized court was first operated in Victoria's police station.

It was moved to the Saanich building only temporarily while the city constructed a separate and larger court facility, he pointed out.

NOT NEW IDEA

"This move is not a new thing," he said. "It is a return to the original location which everyone had agreed was the most practical."

"When the court had to go to Saanich, there was a general outcry at the inconvenience and even Saanich said it was not happy."

The official also pointed out that the department is responsible for appointment of the magistrates and their terms of reference make them provincial (not municipal) magistrates and such they hold court wherever the department directs.

The implication of his remarks was that Saanich police will have to take their cases to the magistrates in the downtown location—or forget about prosecuting them.

HOLIDAY ACCIDENT FATAL

A 14-month-old girl, daughter of a Japanese scientist visiting Victoria, was killed Tuesday in a traffic accident near Calgary.

Father of the dead girl, Dr. Syun'ite Iwao, who was driver of the car, is in serious condition, thought to be suffering from internal injuries.

The mother, who was suffering from shock, has been discharged from hospital and is staying with friends in Calgary.

The accident occurred near the junction of the Coleman-Kananaskis highway, about 30 miles west of Calgary.

The infant, Mariko Iwao, died in Calgary hospital.

The family, holidaying in Calgary, was due back in Victoria Friday.

Dr. Iwao is working on a National Research Council fellowship at the Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside Road.

He arrived in Victoria last December. His wife and baby followed him in April. The baby was their only child.

Police Work During Trial Draws Protest

An impaired driving case Wednesday in Colwood court was adjourned to Sept. 7 to obtain the full details about how the accused was fingerprinted by police.

An RCMP constable was alleged to have fingerprinted R. E. Smith, 385 Claremont, during his trial. Smith's lawyer, J. R. McCollough, said the procedure was unusual and "you can't say a trial is regular when something like this takes place."

Mr. McCollough said the constable should not have talked to his client "let alone take him to the cells to fingerprint him in the middle of a trial."

Mr. McCollough later said he had overheard the constable ask Smith to go and be fingerprinted during a court adjournment Tuesday.

The lawyer raised the matter when the trial resumed Wednesday. Magistrate Harold Alder said the officer concerned should be recalled to clarify the matter and adjourned the case.

Fish-Stealing Fink the Mink Now on the Regular Payroll

By RON SUDLOW

There's a slinky, fish-swiping fink these days at Undersea Gardens.

Not a rat-fink.

But a mink-fink.

And although he's costing the gardens a lot of herring, manager Bill Starkey and his staff have become quite attached to the little visitor.

They've nicknamed him The Fink.

His antics have earned him other names but they are unprintable in family newspapers such as The Times.

It's not the fish-stealing that bothers the Undersea Gardens staff.

It's where the little fink, er, mink has been catching his catches.

For instance, chief diver Mick Vavra thought something was a little fishy when he sat down at his desk the other day.

Seems The Fink had climbed up the back of the desk and began using some of its drawers to store his herring for future use.

And Mr. Starkey has found herring stored in his 36-foot troller which he uses to collect specimens.

Herring have also been the gardens' vessel and em-fund in other locations around ployees figure he's supporting a family.

In fact, The Fink has set up housekeeping — if it can be called that — in an on-deck storage box near the entrance to the Undersea Gardens' lobby.

He was first noticed about two weeks ago hunting crabs in the rocks of the Oak Bay breakwater.

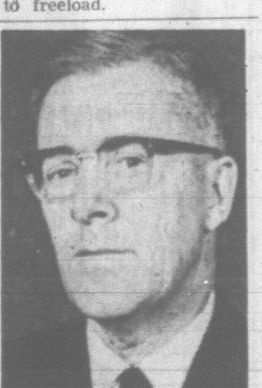

Nobody paid any attention to the little feller until herring supplies started to disappear.

He has been caught sneaking into the storage room and stealing the fish left to thaw for the divers' feeding exhibitions.

And he's even taken herring from submerged boxes positioned around the perimeter of the gardens used to facilitate divers' fish-feeding displays.

He was finally trapped in a net Tuesday. Mr. Starkey wanted to shoot him. But he should have known better than want to shoot a mink especially with girls on his staff.

The Fink is now free again to freeloader.

Margaret Jenkins Classes on Shift

Several classes at Margaret Jenkins Elementary School will have to go on shift for about one month because alterations have not been completed.

The school board announced today there would be at least a month's delay in completion of the alterations because steel decking plates needed in the construction have not arrived from eastern Canada.

City Balks

A request for $15,000 to buy the Emily Carr house was referred to the Greater Victoria Inter-municipal Committee by the city's finance committee today.

"It's time we put a stop to Victoria council putting up the tab for everything that happens in this community," said Ald. Michael Griffin.

"This is for the benefit of the whole community and should be referred to the intermunicipal committee."

The request for the money came from Dr. C. H. Borsman, president of the Greater Victoria Historic Buildings Foundation.

Dr. Borsman said in a letter that the federal government had agreed to match any amount raised by the community to purchase and restore the home.

What's This?

IT IS SO UNUSUAL TO HEAR words of caution from Premier Bennett on anything touching British Columbia's economy that his warning issued at Prince George this week has occasioned wide interest.

Mr. Bennett reportedly spoke of the dangers of financial excesses, of recessions, and of "a crash again" unless a balance is kept. There must be restraint, he said, by management in looking for profits and by labor in seeking higher returns.

High wages and high profits could result in a public refusal to pay, and this, said Mr. Bennett, could result in a business recession.

Mr. Bennett has asserted on numerous occasions that when he says something for public consumption he is not fooling. There is no bluff in his pronouncements, he is fond of telling us. He means what he says.

On this basis his new note of concern for economic law, his newly expressed appreciation of cost as a factor in consumer demand, have ominous overtones. What has turned the premier from his habitual declarations of happy, unending prosperity to grave public warnings of inexorable economic laws?

Opposition leaders speculate that sharply rising construction costs have impressed themselves on Mr. Bennett and caused him to worry about the ultimate price that he must charge for the products of his hydro-electric programs. So often he has promised a low rate for electricity produced on the Columbia and Peace Rivers; so often he has scoffed at warnings that the output of the turbines of his "two-river" policy might prove much more costly than he claimed; so often he has given the impression that nothing but unalloyed prosperity can be the destiny of this province. Now come sober warnings against seeking too much in profits and wages, sombre observations involving the almost unspeakable word "recession".

The public has little to go on. The full cost details of Mr. Bennett's industrial and utility operations are difficult to ascertain. The PGE Railway, the ferry services, the Hydro's production and distribution of electricity, and now the new multi-million-dollar dam and powerhouse construction projects—all these are conducted in a relative vacuum as far as the general public is concerned. It hears of services breaking even on operating costs, for instance, or showing a profit, but there is always an unknown quantity in the equation, there is always a vagueness in the public's grasp of overhead costs which leaves the whole picture clouded. But there is no cloudiness about three facts: We have the highest taxes, the highest annual budget and the highest contingent debt in our history.

Are Mr. Bennett's Peace and Columbia construction costs soaring too high to permit a reasonable price for the eventual product? We are not likely to find out through government sources.

Mr. Bennett does well to fear the effects of a recession. For the vast development programs on which he has ridden to political popularity, the sweeping welfare programs which he has made his trade mark, depend on a rising economy and a continuance of the huge revenues which the government receives from income and sales tax sources.

Should there be a serious slump in these revenues the government might well be in deep trouble. Even though the premier has predicted the province's biggest boom for this year, it is odd that he should have picked Prince George, the centre of much of British Columbia's construction spurge, to utter such atypical remarks as: "there could be a crash again"; and "a recession builds on itself the same as prosperity."

Viet Nam Flypaper

NOW THAT THE UNITED States has embarked on what the New York Times describes as a new "peace offensive" to end the Viet Nam war, what is to be made of the statement this week by South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky that his country is "not ready now" to begin negotiations?

Premier Ky states that South Viet Nam would not begin negotiations until there were firm guarantees that North Vietnamese troops would leave the south and that American troops would stay until Saigon asked them to leave. He added that his regime could not face the threat of Communist political agitation until it has time to start overcoming what he described as the many social and economic injustices in South Viet Nam.

It may not be unreasonable for General Ky to demand that Hanoi remove its military influence from the south as a condition to peace negotiations. It is quite another thing to attempt to lock in American troops as part of the deal, particularly on the basis that they must stay until social and economic injustices are righted. General Ky may honestly be in favor of a new deal for the common people of his country but is there any guarantee that he would long remain in power if he attempted the reforms which South Viet Nam needs?

There is no doubt that the United States has added a new dimension to its involvement in Viet Nam with the reassignment of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge as ambassador with, apparently, much wider powers to initiate on-the-spot policy than he had when he was in Saigon before. Mr. Lodge, indeed, described his objective as a "true revolution" for the country which would result in winning the trust and active support of the bulk of the South Vietnamese people.

The principal assistant to Ambassador Lodge is a retired army expert on guerrilla warfare, Major-General Lansdale, who earned an almost legendary reputation in the Philippines after the war and in South Viet Nam in the early 1950s. His technique is to combat revolts by producing revolutions of his own with the aim of breaking up feudalistic and oligarchic controls and supplanting them with democratic controls. The technique worked in the Philippines against the Communist Huk guerrillas and promised some success in Viet Nam before his work became distasteful to the Diem regime.

Will the Saigon government cooperate with Mr. Lodge and Gen. Lansdale in promoting a "true revolution" in South Viet Nam now, rather than at some misty future date? Premier Ky's statement on terms for negotiation rather indicate that there is some doubt of this. Instead there is the feeling of danger that the United States might be mouse-trapped into supporting some future corrupt regime whose only purpose in retaining power would be the bleeding of the Vietnamese people. Under Premier Ky's formula, for instance, it would be up to Saigon to determine when the threat of Communist political agitation had receded to the point where democratic elections could be held—a repeat of the Diem tactics to remain in power.

In the end the United States may find itself defeated in Viet Nam not by the Viet Cong or by North Vietnamese troops, but by the obduracy and greed of the politicians and military commanders in Saigon.

FROM WASHINGTON

By RICHARD PURSER

THE annual report of the International Monetary Fund, published on Monday, comes at a time of more than usual world interest in the ordinary dry and difficult subject of "international liquidity." Difficult or not, it is fundamental to the standard of living of everyone in the world. "Liquidity" may be summed up as the amount of reserves and credits available to countries of the world to conduct their business with each other.

Purser

In the past few years, concern has been rising among experts that the amount of liquidity now available is insufficient and may cause world trade to "seize up," to quote words frequently used by British Prime Minister Wilson. Other experts deny this, and for every diagnosis of the disease many cures are offered.

One Certainty

The one certainty is that there exists a state of international unease. The United States, which along with Britain is proprietor of one of the world's two major reserve currencies, has formally recognized this. Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler on July 10 surprised international monetary circles by calling, on behalf of President Johnson, for the first world monetary conference since the present international monetary system was set up at Bretton Woods in 1944.

Now Mr. Fowler is in Paris, headquarters of official opposition to reform of the system that has served the non-Communist world for two decades. He will meet finance ministers and central bank chiefs of six European countries before returning to Washington from London on September 10.

The purpose of his visit is to push for an early start in preparations for a conference. The world's finance ministers hold their annual meeting here at the end of next month; the U.S. hopes a preparatory commission can be formed at this meeting. The French publicly take a dim view of this, but there are grounds for Franco-U.S. agreement.

Danger of Failure

Mr. Fowler, in his initial announcement, stressed the danger of calling a formal conference and having it fail. Behind-the-scenes work, he indicated, would have to assure in advance agreement on major points of monetary reform. The French say amen to that, but their emphasis is different. They favor prior settlement of international monetary issues by the "group of ten," the world's major industrial powers whose private deliberations have a colonialist smack to the underdeveloped countries who have the most to lose by strangling or manipulating liquidity.

The IMF report, prepared for the annual meeting, notes that in the last quarter of 1964 "an exceptionally large imbalance in world payments, concentrated in the two main reserve centres, put more strain on the international monetary system than had been experienced for some time."

(Since the end of 1964 the U.S. has acted to ease its balance of payments deficit. Its actions are showing signs of success. The British position is much more precarious; but the great dilemma is that if the two great reserve currency powers succeed fully in correcting their own positions, the financing available for other countries' international trade dries up correspondingly. Yet the outflow of dollars and pounds into the liquidity pool is excessively generous, the value of the reserve currencies themselves is threatened, with potentially disastrous consequences.)

The IMF executive board chairman, Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, has a reputation as a conservative on the question of expanded liquidity. But the report shows that IMF directors are extremely sensitive to the extensive public discussion of liquidity that has been in progress.

While noting the dangers of excessive liquidity—"some countries are likely to pay too little heed to possible deficits and hence to tend to engage in overexpansive financial policies"—the report discusses recent IMF studies of ways to create additional reserves.

"A basic assumption of these studies," it says, "has been that no change will be made in the price of gold in terms of currencies in general. This assumption corresponds to the endorsement of the established price of gold as one of the bases of the present monetary system."

Aussies Have Our Problems

By R. L. CURTHOYS

MELBOURNE — Mr. John McEwen, deputy prime minister and leader of the Farmers' party, has been pointing afresh to what he regards as the peril of letting a large slice of Australian industry fall into overseas hands.

At a conference of his party in Perth he renewed his exposition of the proposition that Australia was living from day to day by selling a bit of its heritage.

"This lack of Australian enterprise," he said bluntly, "isn't good enough." Australians, he went on, should make overseas investors more aware of their desire to participate in foreign investments. Some overseas capital was clearly essential to national development but he had been "rocked" by the passage of much food manufacture into overseas ownership and he was thoroughly unhappy about the extent to which oil search rights had passed into foreign hands, though he realized that Australian capital was not available.

Promptly Answered

When Mr. McEwen made this speech Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies was in hospital in Melbourne but he was promptly answered by Treasurer Harold Holt, deputy leader of the Liberal party. Foreign investment was vital to Australia's growth and security, said Mr. Holt, and on that ground the government encouraged it.

The need for overseas capital would persist as long as primary resources were under exceptional pressure for national development and Australia had heavy responsibilities for defence and international aid.

The harsh reality was that a nation of 11 million people in an area of three million square miles had not enough money for these tasks, hence there was no dispute in any area of government that as far ahead as could be seen, a strong, steady flow of capital would be essential. The government had never wavered in the view that the advantages far outweighed the disadvantages.

Observers incline to think that overseas capital is not so much Mr. McEwen's target as his ammunition. His unrest, they note, is increasingly manifest as the possibility of Sir Robert Menzies' retirement looms larger. He may have one of two objectives.

Continuing Conflict

One is to deter Sir Robert from stepping down. The prime minister, whose doctors have now assured him he is very fit for a man of his age, may well feel disposed to stay in office while Mr. McEwen leads the Farmers' party, lest he expose his successor to a disastrous conflict with so shrewd and strong-willed a partner. Sir Robert and Mr. McEwen have contrived to accept differences without much damage to their coalition; an inexperienced Liberal leader might not have as much success.

Mr. McEwen's alternative objective is probably to give Sir Robert's prospective successor ample notice that he cannot take for granted unquestioning support from the Farmers' party. For six years or more Mr. McEwen has scored many successes for the Farmers' party, the latest being the maintenance of rural representation in the House of Representatives, despite the overwhelming preponderance of population in the big cities. It may not be as simple to score if the next prime minister is less able to dominate Liberal backbenchers objecting to continued concessions to the Farmers' party.

Meanwhile if owners of Australian enterprises choose to sell out, nothing much can be done to deter them without control of investment and for this the government has no taste. The Labor opposition wants legislation providing for an Australian equity of at least 40 per cent in overseas holdings.

Overseas Control

A study of overseas investment recently published by the Melbourne stock exchange showed that overseas ownership of manufacture of pharmaceutical products was 97 per cent, of petroleum refining and distribution 95 per cent, of automobile manufacture 95 per cent, of soap and detergent manufacture 80 per cent and of food manufacture 50 per cent; and as Mr. Holt pointed out, massive foreign investment for the exploitation of iron ore, in Western Australia and bauxite in Queensland, which is 75 per cent of the total, has lent a tremendous impetus to these developments.

Since the end of the last war there has been a total inflow of over $5,000 million in overseas capital, of which more than half has come from the United Kingdom and most of the rest from the United States.

Letters

Smoke Pollution

Re Mr. R. Faulkes' letter on pollution. I am one of the weary complainers. We have tried most everything except the legal aspect. We've seen most officials at City Hall except the Mayor. It's just like playing ping-pong; they bounce the problem around from one to another. Only Thursday we phoned the smoke inspector, and believe me he's fed up with our voice. He just said get on to the newspapers; that, too, we've done. They've even taken pictures.

Good luck to Mr. John Tisdalle, M.L.A. if he can swing it, but I think he'll be wasting his money because if Plumper Bay take out their cone burners and are allowed to burn the same garbage in smoke stacks, the same as B.C. Forest Products are allowed to do, it will be twice as bad. It used to be only five days a week with a reprieve at weekends, but now it's seven days. Saturday night we watched smoke pouring out black for two solid hours from the stacks at B.C. Forest Products, and we woke up to a beautiful bright Sunday morning, but you should have seen the cars. That's our early morning chore, washing cars, then 10 or 12 times a day sweeping soot away from doors so that it's not walked into the rooms.

If Mr. Tisdalle can swing his proposition to full satisfaction, then let's all wake up and make a real effort even if it does mean digging in our pockets. There must be some solution.—E. M. Hawkes, 474 George Rd. E.

Defenders

As a visitor from California, I congratulate Victorians on their intelligent concern for animal welfare, as shown in the indignation over the recent kitten drowning and also the great support for the fine work of Mother Cecilia Mary at Good Shepherd Shelter.

You are humane people. You also are protecting yourselves. Cats and dogs are valuable to kill rats, ground squirrels, and other rodents. We know the grim fact that bubonic plague was brought from the Orient to California in the 19th century. Infected animals have spread over the entire West as far east as Alberta, and thus have created a reservoir of plague which could become a serious outbreak except for the vigilance of our various health agencies in the United States and Canada.

Wise Victorians—to cherish the dog and eat killers of rats, which can carry death to us humans!—G. Hatner, Stockton, California.

Why Pick on U.S.

I have some sympathy for the cause of peace but those peach-marchers on Vancouver Island have forgotten a few things.

I do not recall any protest from those alleged pacifists when Hungary tried to shake off the yoke of Communism; when Russian troops slew thousands of Kurds, whose only crime was that they would not conform to Marx ideology; when China invaded Tibet crushing violently a people's bid for freedom and invaded the Indian border, both actions having a strong imperialistic flavour; and when Indonesia threatened the independence of Malaysia, raiding its borders, and when Egypt was going to destroy Israel.

Having deliberately overlooked acts of aggression by several powers, why pick on the United States of America as the "big bad wolf"?—The Critic.

Monetary Change

In the issue of the Times, Saturday, Aug. 28, under "Week in Business," the most interesting subject, in my estimation, was "Monetary Change Discussed"; now under discussion with the French government in Paris and G. George Bell, under-secretary of state, and Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler of the U.S.

The U.S. wants action to be based on the International Monetary Fund while France is most concerned with the question of international liquidity and some way of financing world trade.

At present, as the article mentions, it is only an exchange of views and examination of ideas, but the worship of the "Golden Calf," the gold standard of today, will have to give way to meet conditions of the world. Money can always be found to wage wars, and build atomic weapons; likewise, ways must be found to give food to countries that require it. Common sense, is it not?—Interested.

Overhead Hazard

New York Times

A FANTASTIC, terrifying — and yet in the present state of world affairs, a necessary — measure of arms preparedness was proclaimed by President Johnson in his news conference yesterday. The United States Air Force has been given the go-ahead signal to build military manned, orbiting laboratories.

On the assumption that the Russians have a similar technical capacity, the world from 1968 onward is going to have manned space ships flying around whose capacity for offense or defense will be formidable beyond previous imagination.

To be sure, the United States and the Soviet Union — and the way things are going, perhaps some other nations — will have the capacity to destroy each other and the world with nuclear missiles launched from earth any time the madness so moves them. But evidently the balance of terror would come unbalanced if one nation has MOL's, as they are referred to in space jargon, and another did not.

The United States Air Force has been demanding orbiting laboratories for years. The reason is essentially defensive. Such space laboratories could have the capacity to intercept and destroy enemy satellites. Their value for surveillance is obvious. As President Johnson said, they will provide "new knowledge about what man is able to do in space" and "will enable us to relate that ability to the defense of the nation."

The MOL's, however, will naturally be capable of offense as well as defense. It was therefore significant that President Johnson should have taken the opportunity to couple his announcement of the military decision with a new peaceful gesture toward Moscow for co-operation in the space program. He invited the Russians to watch the next launching of a Gemini space flight in October.

Looking Back

From The Times of Sept. 2, 1890:

Wellington: The armed guard sent here last month because of alleged incidents in the lock-out of miners at Dunsmuir's coal mine has been reduced to six. At the same time, now that the open season for game is here, miners are able to procure a bountiful supply of all kinds of game. The fire in No. 3 mine continues and may prove difficult to put out. Some coal still is being dug from the mine with 845 tons being brought out in August.

WEATHER—WET, GLOOMY

U.S. WAR FILM SPARKS UPROAR

BERLIN (Reuters)—A West Berlin movie house Wednesday broke off the performance of an American war film entitled Command in Viet Nam after a large group of young people loudly protested against the film police said the demonstrators shouted "Stop it" and "Put an end to this murder." The theatre was cleared by police.

of the ocean, but they do: Wet and gloomy.

There are other factors in the climate, too — changes in temperature of the water and in direction and speed of currents — all of which have a bearing on how well the navigators and scientists can function at their depth of 205 feet 1,000 yards off the southern California coast.

The 10 aquanauts who began living in the house trailer-sized underwater laboratory Saturday started setting up a "weather station" Wednesday 175 feet from Sealab 2.

With the weight of the ocean

on their bodies creating a pressure six times that at the surface, they expect it will take four or five men two days to complete the fairly simple task.

Others will continue hooking up their 12-by-58-foot steel cylinder abode with an underwater communications centre which will expand the number of telephone and television channels to the mother ship on the surface.

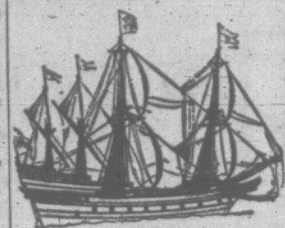

This task is expected to require 24 manhours, maybe more.

A navy spokesman said each man averaged more than 47 minutes of outside work Tuesday and this is expected to increase daily to two or more hours.

Inside they are busy with research projects, such as cataloging marine life in the area, and measuring their own heart beat and brain wave patterns to see if there are any changes due to the stress of living in an underwater world.

Population Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — The bureau of statistics reported Wednesday Canada's population rose to 19,604,000 at July 1, an increase of 333,000 from the mid-year figure for 1964.

Professor Wins Fight For Academic Freedom

By JOHN KOLESAR

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)—"Those of you who know me know that I am a Marxist and a socialist. Therefore . . . I do not fear or regret the impending Viet Cong victory in Viet Nam. I welcome it."

With those words by a Rutgers University professor at a Viet Nam "teach-in" April 23, a chill wind from the cold war blew into New Jersey's election campaign.

State Senator Wayne Dumont Jr., an underdog Republican candidate for governor seeking to end 12 years of Democratic reign, charged a state university had no right to keep on its payroll a professor who expressed such sentiments.

The University board of governors made two reviews of the criticism of Prof. Eugene Genovese, 35, and refused to fire him. It said he kept his political views out of his history classes.

Democratic Governor Richard J. Hughes, favored to win re-election after his upset victory four years ago, refused to overrule the board of governors. Academic freedom prevented it, he said.

PROBE INCONCLUSIVE

A two-man legislative committee made an inconclusive investigation.

Then followed letters to editors, resolutions by veterans organizations, and formation of committees for and against Genovese or academic freedom.

The centre of the controversy is a professor who had admitted being a teen-aged Communist. He said he was expelled by the party in 1950 a few months before the Korean War started and had signed the standard non-subversive oath required of state university professors.

Two years ago he wrote a book review criticizing a Communist author for a retreat from Marxism. A party organ retorted by accusing Genovese of being opposed to peaceful co-existence, accepting nuclear war and of generally favoring Red China and Albania over Russia.

Dumont cited the editorial as proof Genovese, who has been reluctant to say anything in the controversy, retorted that Dumont was repeating false statements originated by the Communists.

YOUTH CORPS HASSLE

Reprimand Follows Official's Remarks

OTTAWA (CP)—The Company of Young Canadians has been caught up in a controversy over remarks by one of its officials.

The comments, amounting to a promise that the still-unborn company will appeal to the country's more radical student elements, have raised a number of eyebrows in top government circles and resulted in a reprimand to their author.

He is Stewart Goodings, assistant director of the peace corps-style company's organizing committee and a former president of the Canadian Union of Students.

Mr. Goodings, in an article for a recent edition of the Student Union for Peace Action newsletter, said the CYC is determined to "reflect the aspirations and concerns of the most progressive elements of the Canadian youth community."

He said students are wrong if they think the company will be "simply a device to divert radical energies into safe, responsible and conventional channels."

NOT OVERNIGHT MOVE

"One must try to encourage new power centres, especially among ordinary people, but one can hardly expect to replace the existing structure overnight."

Informed sources said that when the contents of the article became public knowledge, Mr. Goodings was called on the carpet by his immediate superior, CYC organizing director Duncan Edmonds. As a result of their talk, the sources added, Mr. Goodings is "not likely to write that kind of article again."

Mr. Edmonds confirmed Wednesday that he discussed the article with his subordinate, but declined to spell out details of the conversation.

"I can say, however, that Mr. Goodings' article does not represent my own views or those of the company," Mr. Edmonds said.

He added, however, that he felt Mr. Goodings "has a right" to express his views on the company's philosophy.

City May Fix Traffic Tickets For Doctors

Police Chief J. F. Gregory will be asked to come up with a recommendation on "fixing" traffic tickets for doctors on emergency calls.

The city's legislative committee today decided to ask the police chief following a complaint from Dr. Derek Rogers who was ticketed for improper parking while he was attending an emergency heart patient.

"Some scheme should be worked out in which doctor's vehicles can be identified and the police could then use discretion in ticketing them," suggested Ald. Michael Griffin.

"When there is a complaint from a doctor why don't we just bring the ticket here (to the committee) and fix it for them," said Ald. Clyde Savage.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT
The committee agreed this might set a dangerous precedent.

Ald. Griffin also had a few words to say about commissioners ticketing cars for overtime parking.

"When there is only one car parked in an otherwise deserted block why in the name of hell do they put a ticket on that car for a violation?"

"The law was made to control traffic."

NONSENSE
"We should stop this nonsense. Issuing a ticket in a case like that is stupidity. The commissioners should use some discretion. It's just not thinking," declared Ald. Griffin.

"We don't pay the commissioners to think," said Ald. Lily Wilson. "We pay them to issue tickets."

The committee agreed the matter was one for the traffic committee to handle.

RAY LEJEUNE

Research Lab Director Named New President

Victoria entomologist Ray Lejeune, director of Victoria Forest Research Laboratory, today took office in Fredericton, N.B., as president of the Entomological Society of Canada.

He is now meeting with 200 delegates from Canada and the United States at the University of New Brunswick.

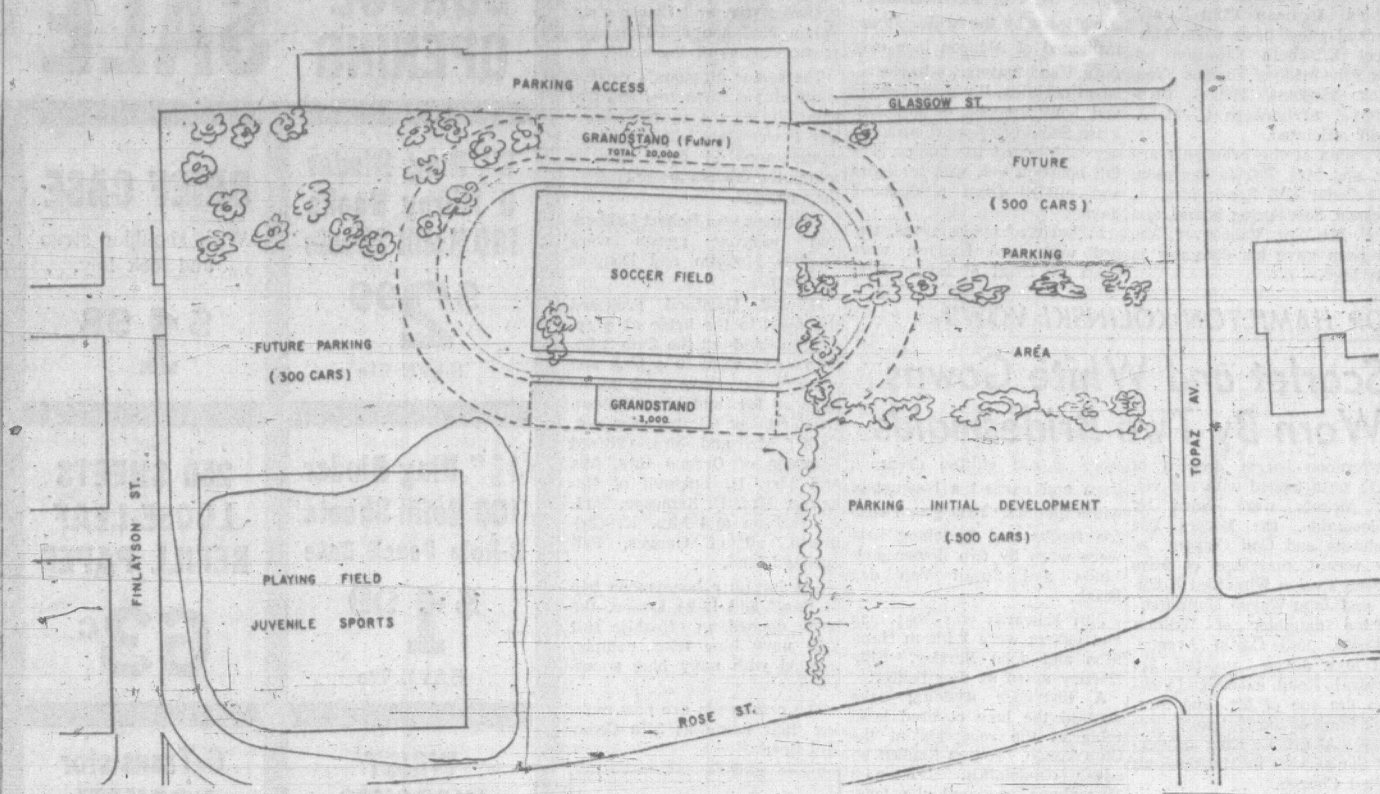

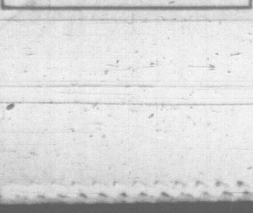

C. L. Neilson of Victoria, who also is attending, is a new director of the society.

The three-day meeting is being held jointly with the Acadian Entomological Society.

Main theme of the discussions is Introduced Insects. Of the 33 scientific papers being presented two are by B.C. entomologists, P. R. Wilkinson of Kamloops and J. Raine of Vancouver.

Discussions cover present preventive measures, biological controls, the arrival and dispersal of foreign insects and how they differ from native insect species.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION

$600,000 BONUS FOR CITY SITE

Mayor Details City Planning for Stadium

Complete details of Victoria City's plan for the joint centennial sports stadium project for the south island area were made public today by Mayor R. B. Wilson.

A sketch plan, printed above, shows provision for one major playing field with a running track around it.

In the initial plan would be a concrete grandstand capable of seating 3,000. In future years additional stands could be erected to take care of 20,000 in all.

The 25-acre site in the Topaz area provides additional fields for junior sports, along with parking areas.

The city owns the bulk of the land now, but to complete the area, would have to purchase about eight acres of land, now privately owned, for about $200,000.

The grand total budget for the scheme is $1,137,650.

If agreement is reached with other municipalities the joint government-municipal project fund, totaling $450,000, would form the nucleus of the project capital.

Then the city proposes to add $600,000 of the money left to it by philanthropist Thomas S. McPherson. The balance of some $87,000 would be raised in other ways.

However, the city's contribution from the McPherson bequest cannot be made unless the project is constructed within the city limits, by the terms of the will.

The detailed budget calls for expenditure of $714,750 on the main centre field and stadium area.

Major part of this cost will be $600,000 for the grandstand itself. This will be on the south side. Additions can later be made on either side of it, and also on the north side of the field.

Other items are:

Grading the field, $12,000.
Sawdust and grass for surface, $15,500.
Drainage, $12,450.
Paving of running track, $36,000.
Lighting, $24,000.
Sprinkler system, $2,500.
Fencing, $8,000.
Gravel, $4,300.

On the south field there is provision for $120,000 expenditure of which $70,000 is for a 500-car parking lot and $50,000 for such extras as drives, landscaping and sports facilities.

The budget is rounded out with $202,900 allocated for purchase of 8.116 acres at $25,000 an acre, and a contingency fund of $100,000.

As explained by Mayor Wilson the area is large enough for later development of additional parking space as well as sports use.

Next step toward agreement on the centennial project will be discussion between the city and Saanich as to whether the Topaz or Saanich's Tillicum area project is most acceptable. Up to now a detailed budget for the Saanich scheme has not been made public.

UP TO SAANICH

Row Due In Saanich On Court

Reeve Asks for Meeting To Clarify Jurisdiction

Saanich is digging for a fight over the attorney-general's department ruling that the centralized Greater Victoria magistrate's court will be returned to its downtown Victoria location.

Reeve Hugh Curtis this morning said he has asked for a meeting "within a few days" with deputy minister Dr. Gilbert Kennedy.

"We are asking for an indication from the department as to the reasons and authority for the move," he said.

"Every indication we have is that where a municipality has its own courtroom and lock-up, such as we do, it is more efficient for it to operate its own court."

Mr. Curtis said Saanich not only will buck the order to take its police cases to the new location but it also has "serious reservations" about the department's suggestion that the centralized family court might move into its police building.

NOT GOOD PRACTICE
"Social workers advise us that it is not good practice to hold juvenile cases or family cases in areas where police uniforms abound," he said.

"Our facility is known as a police building no matter how pretty it looks."

The reeve, however, agreed with a third departmental suggestion that the Greater Victoria municipalities should set up a joint prosecutors' office. But he admitted this likely would not get Saanich's official blessing unless the centralized court was held in its building.

Meanwhile, an official in the attorney-general's department, recalled that the centralized court was first operated in Victoria's police station.

It was moved to the Saanich building only temporarily while the city constructed a separate and larger court facility, he pointed out.

NOT NEW IDEA

"This move is not a new thing," he said. "It is a return to the original location which everyone had agreed was the most practical."

"When the court had to go to Saanich, there was a general outcry at the inconvenience and even Saanich said it was not happy."

The official also pointed out that the department is responsible for appointment of the magistrates and their terms of reference make them provincial (not municipal) magistrates and as such they hold court wherever the department directs.

The implication of his remarks was that Saanich police will have to take their cases to the magistrates in the downtown location—or forget about prosecuting them.

HOLIDAY ACCIDENT FATAL

A 14-month-old girl, daughter of a Japanese scientist working in Victoria, was killed Tuesday in a traffic accident near Calgary.

Father of the dead girl, Dr. Syun'ite Iwao, who was driver of the car, is in serious condition, thought to be suffering from internal injuries.

The mother, who was suffering from shock, has been discharged from hospital and is staying with friends in Calgary.

The accident occurred near the junction of the Coleman-Kananaskis highway, about 30 miles west of Calgary.

The infant, Mariko Iwao, died in Calgary hospital.

The family, holidaying in Calgary, was due back in Victoria Friday.

Dr. Iwao is working on a National Research Council fellowship at the Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside Road.

He arrived in Victoria last December. His wife and baby followed him in April. The baby was their only child.

Police Work During Trial Draws Protest

An impaired driving case Wednesday in Colwood court was adjourned to Sept. 7 to obtain the full details about how the accused was fingerprinted by police.

An RCMP constable was alleged to have fingerprinted R. E. Smith, 985 Claremont, during his trial. Smith's lawyer, J. R. McCollough, said the procedure was unusual and "you can't say a trial is regular when something like this takes place."

Mr. McCollough said the constable should not have talked to his client "let alone take him to the cells to fingerprint him in the middle of a trial."

Mr. McCollough later said he had overheard the constable ask Smith to go and be fingerprinted during a court adjournment Tuesday.

The lawyer raised the matter when the trial resumed Wednesday. Magistrate Harold Alder said the officer concerned should be recalled to clarify the matter and adjourned the case.

Topics of the Day

The 10th annual B.C. Federation of Labour convention will be held in Vancouver Nov. 1-5.

Delegates from the Victoria Labour Council will be secretary-treasurer A. W. Toone and second vice-president E. T. Staley, who is also president of the 110,000-member federation.

Pacific Command Rifle Association will hold its annual rifle competition Saturday and Sunday at Heil's Range.

Between 60 and 80 participants are expected to enter. The event will take up most of both days, and entry forms will be available from 7:30 a.m. Saturday at the range.

Trophies will be presented at 4:30 p.m. Sunday by Commodore R. M. Battles.

All provincial government offices will be closed Monday for the Labor Day holiday but the provincial museum will stay open, it was announced today.

The museum, in the east wing of the Parliament Buildings, will be open to the public from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

A 14-year-old girl was knocked 30 feet by a car as she crossed Quadra at North Park Wednesday afternoon.

May Chan, 927 Pembroke, is reported in good condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital. Police said driver of the car was Alfred E. Stillborn, 3208 Weatherby.

Stefan Krancevic, 49, of 478 Quadra, is in fairly good condition today after being injured in an accident at Bay and Chambers.

Police said he was driver of a car that was in collision with another vehicle driven by Roy Ege, 806 Lampson.

Frank Woods, 1256 Oliver, was fined $300 and had his licence suspended when he pleaded guilty in Oak Bay court Wednesday to impaired driving.

Police said he was arrested after colliding with a parked car on Hampshire and Oak Bay.

A 51-year-old worker on a construction site at the social sciences building on the University of Victoria campus was injured this morning when a plank gave way under him.

E. G. Bissenden, 1280 Newport, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital for a check-up on back injuries. He fell 10 feet to the ground.

The new YM-YWCA will hold open house Saturday Sept. 11. Doors at 890 Courtney Street will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to noon, 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Demonstrations in the gymnasium and the swimming pool will be presented at intervals during the day.

Guides will be on hand throughout the building.

City hall is going to make a detailed study of the taxi fare schedule in Victoria.

The finance committee decided to undertake the study after considering a plea by Blue Bird Cabs and C & C Transportation Co. to increase their rates in Victoria because of rising costs.

"This is a complete change of pace by the taxi companies," said city manager Dennis Young.

"When they applied for an increase last April the reason they gave was to eliminate the complications of the different rates between Victoria and the other municipalities where taxi rates are governed by the Public Utilities Commission."

"If they had said last April that the reason they wanted to raise the rates was because of increased costs this matter would have been cleared up by now."

The Fink is often seen playing catch-as-cache-can with Undersea Gardens officials.

Fish-Stealing Fink the Mink Now on the Regular Payroll

By RON SUDLOW

There's a slinky, fish-swiping fink these days at Undersea Gardens.

Not a rat-fink. But a mink-fink.

They've nicknamed him The Fink.

His antics have earned him other names but they are unprintable in family newspapers such as The Times.

It's not the fish-stealing that bothers the Undersea Gardens staff.

It's where the little fink, er, mink has been caching his catches.

For instance, chief diver Mick Vavra thought something was a little fishy when he sat down at his desk the other day.

Seems The Fink had climbed up the back of the desk and began using some of its drawers to store his herring for future use.

And Mr. Starkey has found herring stored in his 36-foot troller which he uses to collect specimens.

Herring have also been found in other locations around the gardens' vessel and employees figure he's supporting a family.

In fact, The Fink has set up housekeeping — if it can be called that — in an on-deck storage box near the entrance to the Undersea Gardens' lobby.

He was first noticed about two weeks ago hunting crabs in the rocks of the Oak Bay breakwater.

Nobody paid any attention to the little feller until herring supplies started to disappear.

He has been caught sneaking into the storage room and stealing the fish left to thaw for the divers' feeding exhibitions.

Margaret Jenkins Classes on Shift

Several classes at Margaret Jenkins Elementary School will have to go on shift for about one month because alterations have not been completed.

The school board announced today there would be at least a month's delay in completion of the alterations because steel decking plates needed in the construction have not arrived from eastern Canada.

City Balks

A request for $15,000 to buy the Emily Carr house was referred to the Greater Victoria Inter-municipal Committee by the city's finance committee today.

"It's time we put a stop to Victoria council putting up the tab for everything that happens in this community," said Ald. Michael Griffin.

"This is for the benefit of the whole community and should be referred to the intermunicipal committee."

The request for the money came from Dr. C. H. Borsman, president of the Greater Victoria Historic Buildings Foundation.

Dr. Borsman said in a letter that the federal government had agreed to match any amount raised by the community to purchase and restore the home.

Got Cold in the Nose? Don't Suffer, Read On!

By PENNY SAVER

End of the summer and cooler weather spells chest colds in our family. It never fails, every year at the advent of school days, so the sniffles and coughs start and, like most mothers facing the situation, I am taking precautions, and crossing my fingers that the old 'flu and cold bug ignores us.

Unlike the old days when children really needed a spoonful of sugar to help the medicine go down, vitamin supplements are now as tasty as candy.

In one pharmacy that I shopped at, I was astonished to find bottles of vitamin concentrate especially prepared for youngsters—at a reasonable price. Large (they contain 25 fluid ounces), the supplements include Vitamins A, B1, B6, C, D, niacinamide and they are priced at $2.88 a bottle.

If your child should come down with a cold, there are some marvellous drops laced with ingredients for anti-pain, anti-cold and anti-fever. These diminish a great deal of the misery of a cold and are harmless when used as prescribed.

A large jar of vitamins that look and taste like old-fashioned candy but are strong on supplements is selling for $2.99 for 150 tablets. Adults and children alike will enjoy taking these tasty vitamin tablets.

The tantalizing flavor of raspberry is featured in an excellent cough syrup that youngsters take to instantly. The preparation dulls the hacking cough and brings relief in no time. A bottle sells at 89 cents.

Pains and fever of the 'flu or a chill can make life pretty miserable especially if it's impossible for you to go to bed and recover in comfort. These cold pills I have discovered are guaranteed to reduce the discomfort. They contain an antihistamine and a decongestant and their manufacturer claims they give all day and night relief. Take one in the morning and one at bedtime. Ten tablets costs $1.49.

While shopping in this drugstore, I noticed family size bottles of castile and lanolin oil shampoo at 98 cents. That's reasonable as the bottles contain 32 fluid ounces and contain ingredients suitable for every head of hair!

Where did Penny shop? Find out, by phoning me at 382-3131.

Banff Honeymoon Follows Service In St. Michael's

A honeymoon in Banff was spent by newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lewis Goddard following their recent marriage in St. Michael's and All Angels' Church, Royal Oak.

The former Barbara Ellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Walker, 3365 Cook Street, and her groom were married by Canon J. Rogers in a setting of gladioli.

Mr. Goddard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. L. Goddard, 768 Haliburton Road.

A sequin and seed pearl trimmed lace bodice highlighted the lovely white organza gown worn by the bride as she entered the church on the arm of her father. The bodice was enhanced by a sweetheart neckline and sleeves were lily point. Lace panels extended down the bouffant floor length skirt. A double coronet studded with seed pearls held her four-tier veil. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace, gift of the groom. Red roses, white carnations and lily of the valley were in her bouquet.

ATTENDANTS

Preceding the bride up the aisle were her attendants, the Misses Ruth and Judy MacKay. They wore full skirted gowns in yellow organza over taffeta. Large white rose headpieces centred in yellow were worn and they carried bouquets of rust-toned carnations.

The groom's brother-in-law, Geoff Horner, was best man, and ushers were Gordon Goddard and James Walker.

George West-Johnson proposed the toast at the reception in Holyrood House.

For going away, the new Mrs. Goddard donned a pink suit, white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and lily of the valley.

The newlyweds are making their home at 4955 Highgate Road, Victoria.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Good Health Is More Than Absence of Illness and Pain

Too many folks think of good health in a negative sense, as merely an absence of illness or pain. Actually we should think of it in a much more positive way because fine health is positive and vibrant.

It is that extra amount of energy which makes movement a pleasure, adds zest to daily life, keeps laughter close to the surface, sharpens awareness, lifts facial contour, adds glow to personality, attracts friends and turns problems into challenges. Vibrant health as compared to just the absence of disease is the difference between being fully alive and only half alive.

In their interesting and helpful book "Add Life To Your Years" (The John Day Company, New York) Doctors Ernest P. Boas and Norman F. Boas emphasize this fact. They point out that "A person without disease may be soft and flabby, too stout or too thin, plagued with indigestion from improper eating habits so that he drags himself through the day's routine with the greatest effort and distress. It is quite possible for most of us to achieve a state of well-being if we give attention to some elementary precepts of hygiene and common sense."

How foolish we are if we don't pay attention, as a regular habit, to the tenets of good health. They are so simple that it is difficult to believe in their importance. The kind of food we eat can make such a difference.

Students Demanding Birth Control Facts

LENNOXVILLE, Que. (CP)—Students who want birth control information should be entitled to get it, the Canadian Union of Students decided Wednesday.

Delegates to the union's annual meeting adopted a resolution aimed at making legal the sale of contraceptives and the dissemination of birth control information.

The resolution, calling for the necessary change in the Criminal Code, was the only one adopted in plenary session, which in effect makes it part of the official policy of the group which represents students at some 45 universities, colleges and technical institutes across Canada.

Adopted at the committee level, and slated for later presentation to the full assembly, were resolutions calling for the abolition of tuition fees and for the recognition, on terms of equality, of the Quebec student union, l'Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec.

The Canadian affairs committee called for the abolition of university level tuition fees along with such expenses as room and board, books and travelling expenses to and from universities.

Opposition to the motion came from the universities of Saskatchewan and Manitoba whose delegates felt students might be accepting a principle that the Canadian nation had rejected many times, by taking government subsidies to cover all tuition fees and other expenses.

'CAUSES UNREST'

George Hees, president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, told the students lack of communication between French- and English-speaking Canada is responsible more than anything else for current unrest in Quebec.

Mr. Hees said most of Canada's federal leaders, unable to speak French, "have had to rely on lieutenants for their advice on Quebec problems and this advice was not always soundly based."

"The rare appearances of our federal leaders in Quebec, except at election time, and

communication lack

their inability to communicate directly with the people, has left the definite impression that they were not interested in Quebec's problems."

Mr. Hees was convinced, however, that Quebec would not separate from the rest of Canada.

He said Quebecers realized that "economically and every other way Quebec needs the rest of Canada and the rest of Canada needs Quebec."

The key to a workable partnership between English and French Canada was mutual understanding based on increased dialogue between the two founding races.

May Force Election

LONDON (Reuters) — Sir Harry Hylton-Foster, speaker of the House of Commons, collapsed and died today, plunging Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government into a political and constitutional crisis.

HYLTON-FOSTER
collapses on street

Hylton-Foster, 60, who contested the last general election as a non-party candidate, was dead on arrival at a hospital after collapsing on a London street.

A policeman tried in vain to revive him with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when he collapsed just a few streets from the spot where U.S. United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson died July 14.

The prime minister immediately called in house leader Herbert Bowden to discuss the implications for the government, which holds office with a slim over-all margin of two in the 630-seat lower house.

The margin was cut from three recently by the death of a Labor MP, and this constituency is expected to elect another Labor candidate in a by-election.

MAY SPEED ELECTION

There was immediate speculation that the crisis might be settled only by calling a general election earlier than expected.

If the Labor party named a new speaker from within its own parliamentary ranks, and lost the by-election, its majority could be reduced to one.

With the death of Hylton-Foster, much will now depend on the stand taken by new Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath.

The government could lose its over-all margin in the house if:

- The government lost its pending by-election at Erith and Crayford, near London, cutting its over-all margin to one. This would be a shock result, since Labor's majority over Conservatives was nearly 9,000 votes in the general election;

- Heath refused to allow a Conservative to become Speaker, forcing the government to provide the new Speaker from its own ranks;

- The safe Conservative seat of the cities of London and Westminster—until now held by Hylton-Foster—was again contested on a party basis and won by the opposition.

The entire situation became even more complex in its purely constitutional aspect, since there is no modern precedent for the death of a Speaker during a parliamentary recess.

This could hold up technical arrangements for the Erith by-election, originally planned for early October—well before Parliament returns from its summer recess Oct. 26.

The authority for a special election has to be given by the Speaker, and this now will be delayed until a new Speaker is chosen.

Both sides agreed last October that Hylton-Foster—former Conservative minister who became speaker during the previous conservative administration—should keep his post.

Ghana President
Ousts Generals,
Takes Over Army

ACCRA (AP) — President Kwame Nkrumah has taken direct command of Ghana's army following widespread rumors that some generals wanted to depose him.

Sources said two generals, ousted from their posts and retired in a surprise move last month, suggested Ghana would be better off without Nkrumah.

There was no indication, however, the generals actually plotted against the Ghanaian president.

Nkrumah took over command of the army Tuesday in a ceremony at Accra's Burmah camp.

His newly appointed chief of defence, Maj.-Gen. N. A. Aferi, and other senior officers then took an oath of allegiance to Nkrumah.

Aferi and Maj.-Gen. Charles M. Barwah were named chief and deputy chief of the defence staff early last month, replacing Maj.-Gen. S. J. A. Otu and J. A. Ankrah respectively.

CRITICIZE REGIME?

Reliable reports indicated the two relieved generals expressed resentment of Nkrumah's regime. Neither of the newly-retired officers, both 49, has been held or charged.

Ghana's government — controlled press and radio gave no reasons for the unexpected staff changes.

By taking direct command of the 10,000-man army Nkrumah left Defence Minister Kofi Baako with only the jobs of civil defence, the veterans organization and administrative work.

Nkrumah previously had taken direct command of his personal security battalion which acts as his household guard.

Ghana's special security police are Russian — advised. All other police have been dismissed since a young constable attempted to shoot Nkrumah in February, 1964.

STOLEN $2 MILLION IN BONDS RECOVERED

VIOLENT RAIN STORMS forced rescuers to string a lifeline to rescue a woman near Orvieto, Italy, Wednesday. The rain continues today as the country counted at least 11 people dead with dozens injured. The hardest hit area stretched from Rome to Orvieto, about 80 miles north of the Italian capital. About 20 autos were swept off the highway Wednesday by the sudden rain. (AP Wirephoto)

Police Follow
Telephone Tip

MONTREAL (CP) — Possibly more than $2,000,000 worth of bonds stolen from a bank last spring have been recovered by police as the result of a telephone tip.

The bonds were found Wednesday night tightly packed in a suitcase and several cardboard boxes, in a field north of Metropolitan Boulevard off Christophe Colomb St.

The robbery was staged the weekend of April 10-11 at a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in the Van Horne shopping centre. There were estimates at the time that the total loot may be as high as $3,000,000.

A team of eight detectives worked today testing the recovered bonds for fingerprints and tabulating them by serial numbers and denominations.

They said the total value of the recovered bonds may be well more than $2,000,000. The bonds, most of them Canada Savings Bonds, range in denomination from $50 to $10,000.

Detective — Insp. Roland Perron of the Montreal police department was in his office Thursday when a telephone call came through about 1:30 p.m.

TOLD TO EXPECT CALL

The caller said: "Be in your office between three and five o'clock this afternoon. I'll have something to tell you that's plenty big."

Insp. Perron waited until 5:30 p.m. There was no call. He left for an appointment at city hall, then went home to dinner.

Concerned that the promised call may have come in his absence, he returned to his office. But the call went to his home. The caller was told the inspector was at headquarters.

The caller reached Insp. Perron at 8:10 p.m. He was told that the bonds were being put in the field. The caller said: "I'm not interested in the reward."

The bank had offered a $25,000 reward for arrest of the perpetrators of the crime.

The robbery set off a worldwide hunt for the robbery gang. Two men were arrested in Plattsburgh, N.Y., when they tried to cash travellers' cheques taken in the robbery.

A Winnipeg man was picked up for the same reason at a Hamburg, N.Y., racetrack.

A Vancouver man was arrested in England when he tried to cash $600 worth of travellers' cheques at Hove, Sussex.

Joe Bedard, chief security officer for the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal, said today that no direct link between the picked-up men and the robbery has been established and the cases have not been proceeded with. Charges of receiving have been considered.

The robbery was one of the largest in Canada, believed to rank second only to the robbery May 24, 1958, at the Brockville Trust and Savings Co., in Brockville, Ont. Final count of the loot stolen from vaults was $3,500,000.

CONFERENCE DELAYED

The biracial conference was delayed Wednesday night when officials decided it was better not to meet at night.

Negro demands include denunciation of the Klan by the city of Natchez, desegregation of public facilities, equal job opportunities and police escorts for Negro funerals.

NAACP field secretary Charles Evers said Wednesday "tension is growing." Mississippi Klan Dragon E. L. McDaniel said, "we have been armed for some time and we are going to stay armed."

Natchez is not going to be another Los Angeles.

In another trouble spot, Plymouth, N.C., civil rights leaders were granted a permit for a march to the courthouse and new biracial council held its first meeting.

Offensive Into Kashmir

KARACHI (UPI) — Troops of the regular Pakistani army have advanced 28 miles east into Indian-held Kashmir in their first open assault against Indian army troops, it was reported unofficially here tonight.

The first thrust of the attack Wednesday carried the Pakistanis up to eight miles inside Indian territory and the Pakistanis moved another 20 miles today against what a spokesman called only "negligible" resistance.

The reports said the troops accompanied by Azad (Free) Kashmiri forces, had reached the town of Akhaur, barely 15 miles from Jammu City, a major communication link on road connecting India and Pakistan.

The troops were reported using tanks and artillery and moving under cover of warplanes.

(The Indian defence ministry announced in New Delhi that air battles broke out today over the disputed area and that the Indian planes drove off Pakistani F86 Sabrejets believed equipped with American Sidewinder missiles.

'Very Heavy' Casualties Report

(The Indian spokesman made no mention of losses on either side. Earlier, it was admitted that four Indian fighter-bombers were shot down by Pakistani planes Wednesday.)

A Pakistani defence ministry spokesman in Rawalpindi said the Indian forces were suffering "very heavy" casualties in the fighting raging in the southwest corner of the disputed Kashmir territory.

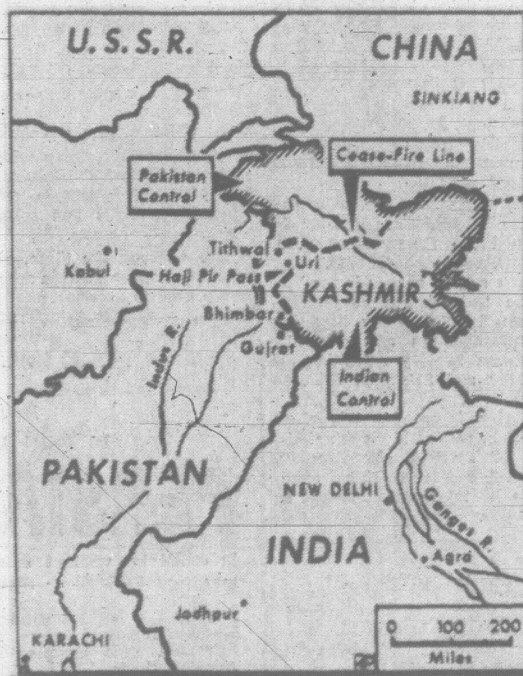

He said the eastward advance by the combined Pakistani-Azad Kashmiri troops "remained unchecked."

Observers here said it appeared the Pakistani forces were attempting to cut the only major road linking Indian-held Kashmir with India.

The spokesman said that the initial thrust across the cease-fire line Wednesday resulted in the capture of 150 Indian army prisoners and 15 tanks in "perfect running condition."

In New Delhi Prime Minister Shastri accused Pakistan of destroying the Kashmiri cease-fire agreement and the line itself.

He said the Pakistani attack had all the features of a "planned and organized invasion."

ANYONE GOT $2 MILLION HANDY?

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)

—This may be the perfect gift for that fellow who has everything: A Nevada ranch the size of Luxembourg.

The ranch of slain millionaire William A. Bartholomae, covering 900 square miles, is up for sale.

Included are cattle and coyotes, green irrigated valleys and desert mountains, 54 horses and a host of buildings. If you like space, it's roughly 66 miles from front door to back gate.

There are 20 buildings at the Fish Creek Ranch including a cottage, office, kitchen-recreation hall, bunk house, saddle and tack room and barns.

Sealed bids will be opened Sept. 7.

But the property has been appraised at $1,876,313.90, including land and leases, grazing rights, the horses, 2,220 head of Hereford cattle and $9,535 worth of vehicles.

The sale notice stipulates that the entire ranch is to be sold as a package.

Bartholomae, 70, was fatally stabbed in his Newport Beach, Calif., home Jan. 5, 1964, by Minga Gillardo, 32, a dancer from Spain. Her sister was married to Bartholomae's brother.

She was acquitted July 7, 1964, after testifying that the language barrier between her and Bartholomae led to a struggle and his death.

Nkrumah will never let it be said he ain't Ghana reign no more.

If Saanich an' Victoria get into a hassle about th' sports stadium folks are likely t' say, a plague-round on both yer houses.

Boyd Defends Medicare Blast

A strongly-worded speech against the proposed national medicare proposal was defended today by the president of the Victoria Medical Society after it was attacked by the Victoria Labour Council.

Dr. D. M. Boyd, VMS president, said he personally supported the main criticisms voiced by Dr. G. Scott Wallace against Prime Minister Pearson's universal medicare program.

He added that although not officially approved by the society, Dr. Wallace's speech represented the feeling of a majority of doctors.

Labor union delegates passed a unanimous resolution Wednesday night condemning Dr. Wallace and the society for the tone of his speech and the suggestion that doctors would rather strike than accept a compulsory plan in which they were not consulted.

"I haven't heard or seen the text and there has not been too much said to me about the speech by other doctors," Dr. Boyd said.

ECHOED FEELINGS

"But, although he wasn't officially speaking for us, I think he was echoing the feelings of most doctors."

Dr. Boyd said he personally was in "full agreement" with criticisms of a universal plan and failure of the government to invite the Canadian Medical Association to help plan some form of medical insurance.

"I feel every man should stand on his own two feet and only those who can't pay should be helped by the government," he said.

said. "And I think that's the opinion of most people who have thought about the subject."

CONSULTED

"And the doctors, who are expected to participate, should be consulted first by the government. People in any field should be consulted about legislation which is going to involve them."

"Labor, for instance, is most irate if there is any labor legislation passed without them being consulted first," said Dr. Boyd.

At the labor council meeting, Jack Driscoll proposed motions of censure against the society and Dr. Wallace.

'DISGUSTING'

He called doctor's comments "a disgusting exhibition." This was a reference to the use of such words as "bastard" and "complete abortion" in Dr. Wallace's description of the Pearson proposal.

E. T. Staley, president of the B.C. Federation of Labour, said the speech was premature and ill founded.

"I don't think the doctor knows what the scheme is going to be," he said.

"I don't know why he wants to condemn holus-bolus a scheme to help many Canadians."

"He has taken a very reactionary opinion. It's about time he looked forward instead of backward."

MINIMUM WAGES

Only 4 Orders Below $1 Level

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Labor Reporter

One-third of British Columbia's minimum wage orders equal or exceed the minimum set by the federal government.

But individual orders covering the biggest employee groups in the province fall 25 cents below the federal minimum of $1.25 an hour.

The federal minimum enacted this year applies to the roughly 10 per cent of Canadians who work in industries falling under federal jurisdiction.

Unlike the federal labor code, B.C. prescribes minimum wages on an occupational or industry basis.

There are 34 individual minimum wage orders contained in the annual summary of regulations printed by the provincial government.

They range from as little as 50 cents an hour to as much as $2 an hour.

The biggest areas of employment are logging and sawmills, the wholesale and retail trade, manufacturing and offices.

The minimum wage in these employee groups is $1 an hour, but in three of them—wholesale and retail, manufacturing and offices—this rate is payable only in the fourth month after starting at 85 cents.

The minimums are set by the Board of Industrial Relations, an eight-member group headed by the deputy labor minister, William Sands.

Generally, the minimums follow the pattern of wages in the industry or occupation concerned, although this is not always the case.

Under review at the present time is the $1-an-hour minimum for logging and sawmills. Basic rate for coastal union workers is $2.36.

At a public hearing two months ago, the International Wood-workers of America requested the minimum be raised to $1.50 an hour.

At the same time, the B.C. Federation of Labor argued that a minimum of $1.50 an hour is the only acceptable minimum wage that can be applied to any industry in the province.

Of the 34 current orders stating minimum wages, four are for less than $1.18 for more than $1 but less than $1.25, and 12 for $1.25 or more.

These minimums cover nearly all workers in B.C., excepting those who come under federal jurisdiction, provincial government employees and a variety of professional people ranging from architects to veterinarians.

At the bottom of the minimum wage orders are delivery boys on bicycle and foot and harvesters of Christmas trees. But the 50 cents an hour is being reviewed for the Christmas tree industry.

At the top are construction tradesmen, car mechanics, stationary steam engineers, machinists and moulders. Many of these men earn much more than the $2 an hour minimum in a highly-unionized field.

Statistics are not available on how many employers actually pay only the minimum wages.

Tables of average weekly wages in major employee groups show even the lowest averages well above minimum wage levels.

One indication that some employers do pay the minimum is contained in the labor department's annual report dealing with violations of the regulations.

Last year, 595 companies were involved in investigations covering 1,904 persons under the Male and Female Minimum Wage Acts.

Arrears of $75,000 were paid as a result of these checks, compared with $67,000 in 1963.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

It was cloudy over much of British Columbia Wednesday night but skies did clear in the Kootenays and temperatures dropped into the low thirties. The northwesterly flow of air over the province will continue for the next few days bringing pockets of moisture over the land. This will lead to variable cloudiness and a few showers to the northern and eastern portions of the province.

Two-City Dahlia Show Reviving?

Local flower fans are hoping to revive interest in an international dahlia show, last held in 1916, which alternated each year between Vancouver and Seattle.

Saanich dahlia grower Mrs. Patricia Pierrt will negotiate with American growers to try and start up the show again when she attends the Seattle Dahlia Show this weekend.

Representing the Victoria Horticultural Society and the Vancouver Island dahlia growers, she will be the first Canadian dahlia grower asked to speak at the Seattle conference.

While there, she will also receive trophies for four Saanich dahlia growers who captured honors at last weekend's Snohomish County Dahlia Show at Everett, Wash.

They are Maj. George Wiggan, who received two firsts, a section championship and a silver tray for the pom-pom exhibition; Lois Freeborn, two firsts, a section championship, and a trophy for the lilac vell exhibit; Gordon Bentham, four firsts, a section championship, a trophy for the exhibit of miniature decorative, and the best A-sized bloom in show; and Harry Parker, 11 firsts, seven seconds, one third, and four section championships.

Entry forms must be received not later than 6 p.m. on the 10th, and prize list and form can be obtained from the secretary, T. D. Clark, telephone 477-6718.

The second chance is the Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society's early flowering chrysanthemum and dahlia show, a two-day exhibition for Friday and Saturday, Sept. 10 and 11.

Entry forms for this show must be mailed to the secretary, G. L. Bentham, by Tuesday, Sept. 7, and schedules are available by telephoning 384-2201 or 382-9836.

Wide Power On Cheats Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — The government must have wide powers to catch fraudulent taxpayers and the fact a few innocent people may have inadvertently become involved in the process should not deter such activity, J. T. Thorson, retired president of the Exchequer Court, said Wednesday.

"There is an absolute necessity to have this procedure to catch tax cheaters," he said. "Some innocent people have become involved, but they are few. Against this is the need to catch fraudulent taxpayers and the need to protect the whole of the public."

His comments were made during a wide-ranging exchange on the need for broad search and seizure powers granted the government under the Income Tax Act during the annual meeting of the taxation section of the Canadian Bar Association.

Senator Asks Study On N.A. Water Plan

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government has taken no position on the $100,000,000 plan to channel water from northern Canadian rivers and Alaska southward as far as Mexico.

A resolution asking for an economic and engineering study was introduced in the Senate Wednesday by Frank Moss, Utah Democrat who heads a subcommittee which took a preliminary look at the scheme last year.

But a spokesman in the Moss office said today that the U.S. government has no policy on the matter. Senator Moss wrote State Secretary Rusk earlier this year to ask that Canada be approached about turning studies over to the International Joint Commission.

No action has been taken by the state department and senior authorities in Ottawa have said nothing has come from Washington.

The LIC is the Canada-U.S. agency handling boundary water problem and right now it is deep in an extensive look at the problems causing and caused by the low levels of the Great Lakes.

called the senator's resolution a "good try to get the LIC interested" but this would require official action on both sides of the border.

The water-diversion plan is called the North American Water and Power Alliance and it is the brainchild of the Ralph M. Parsons Company, a construction and engineering firm with world-wide operations.

Tentative soundings in Canada by the company are known to have drawn indications that until Canada has a good picture of all her fresh-water resources—and this will take at least five years even though a lot more effort has been turned loose on this work recently—there is nothing to be said.

After that, it is still not too promising in view of public statements by Northern Affairs Minister Laing or Premier Bennett of British Columbia that Canada's water isn't for sale.
